STARVATION, PILLAGING, CONFUSION

Horror of Biafra Shocks Reporters

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

OWERRI, Nigeria (AP)—The first newspaper men allowed inside fallen Biafra saw famished refugees fighting for food, looting by Nigerian soldiers and heard several first-hand accounts of women being raped by victorious Nigerian troops.

The farther the press party went inside former Biafran territory, the worse the conditions of hunger, homelessness and confusion became.

Everywhere refugees were on the road, teetering all their worldly goods on their heads, hunting lost husbands and children, trying desperately to change their Biafran money into Nigerian pounds to buy what food was available at little impromptu roadside markets.

A young British doctor, working in Nigeria less than two weeks, leaned his head against an ambulance and wept with rage.

"I've had Lugers stuck in both my ears," he sobbed. "My life has been threatened umpteen times by soldiers wanting to steal my trucks and ambulances."

LIE IN PUS

The doctor said he had just returned from an open field where 80 to 100 wounded Biafran soldiers were "lying in their own pus and excrement, waiting for treatment that never arrived."

"They bloody well ought to be dead," he said. "Now I've got to go try and fix them up. Don't go near them unless you've got clothespins on your nose."

Without naming the unit, he said the soldiers on duty in the area of the pediatric hospital at Okporo were "such monsters" he never let the nurses go anywhere without an escort, "especially white ones—the native nurses can always go into the bush if something happens."

"The young girls are afraid to come out of the bush, they are terrified of what will happen," Ibo novelist Cyprian Ekwensi told reporters. "There is now a saying among them: 'Stay in hiding or you will be conscripted into the army.'"

"My sister Bibi was taken off and raped by the soldiers," a university student named Paul Ohagwa said. Two Biafran nurses who would only give their names as Theresa and Caroline said they were raped several times as they passed through roadblocks trying to make their way out of the bush.

FEAST AMONG FAMINE

In Port Harcourt, recaptured by federal troops 17 months ago and now a state capital, the state governor entertained top brass at his daughter's wedding feast. But just a few miles away, Ibo refugees faced death. About 600 were crammed into the tiny Niger Maternity Home, many of them lying motionless in the hot sun amid vomit, dust and flies.

A group of British construction workers took up a collection to find food for them. They said three to four died daily.

Many of the children could not move and lay gasping as nurse Elna Petersen of Copenhagen tried to feed them.

"God help these children," Londoner Les Archer told reporters.

"Nobody else seems to want to. I cannot believe this is happening."

"The villages are the worst off," said an Irish missionary, Rev. Eammon McMahon, surrounded by hundreds of refugees begging for Nigerian

Children Still Dying

OWERRI, Nigeria (Reuters) — Children are still dying here today, and thousands more seem inevitably destined to perish, as the Nigerian government tries to make its relief efforts work in former Biafra.

Nine days after the fall of this last capital of the secessionist state, there are children with kwashiokor (protein deficiency) here who sit crying helplessly in the dust while their parents fight each other over grains of cornmeal.

The whole civilian population appears to be hungry, and a member of an Austrian Red Cross team said here "plenty are dying, most of them in the bush."

The people here try hopelessly to buy what little food there is with Biafran money, which now is valueless. Thousands throng the market, where there is little more than red peppers for sale.

They say there isn't even cassava, their staple root diet, or yams in the countryside—one of the most densely-peopled regions in Africa. The defeated Ibo, whose leaders formally surrendered Thursday, now are eating cassava leaves to stay alive.

CAN'T FIND FOOD

Red, yellow and white blossoms adorn the trees, but there is no sign of the "food in the trees and the ground" referred to last week in Lagos by a member of a military observer team here.

MP SAYS REPORTS PROPAGANDA MOVE

TORONTO (CP) — Refugees of the Nigerian civil war are not starving, says Robert Thompson, Progressive Conservative MP for Red Deer, Alta.

In a cable from Nigeria, received Tuesday by Rev. William Fitch of Knox Presbyterian Church and World Vision, a relief organization that sponsored his trip, Thompson said:

"Reports of starving millions have been victory for skillful propagandists. Conditions are under commendable control and no starvation. Resettlement and reconstruction Canada's prime responsibility. Continuing inspection."

Israeli Task Force Invades Jordan Area

From AP-Reuters

An Israeli armored force crossed into Jordan south of the Dead Sea Tuesday night and remained for nearly 20 hours, striking at Arab guerrilla bases, the Israeli military command reported today.

Jordan said there was a major land and air battle.

The Israelis said their force killed five guerrillas and suffered no casualties or damage. Al Fatah, the guerrilla organization, said its men killed two of the raiders and destroyed two Israeli tanks.

It was the longest Israeli penetration of Jordan since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

INCLUDES 40 TANKS

Reports to Amman, Jordan's capital 100 miles northeast of the battle area, said the Israeli force included about 40 tanks and half-tracks backed by heavy artillery.

A Jordanian spokesman said the Israelis invaded at 7 p.m. Tuesday after an air raid in which one Jordanian civilian was killed and three others wounded.

The initial Israeli announcement did not disclose the size of the raiding force.

The military command in Tel Aviv said the operation was launched "following repeated attacks from Jordanian territory on the Dead Sea potash works at Sodom and on civilian settlements in the region."

The potash works were shelled Monday night. Israelis said the shelling attacks came from the village of Safi, a target on Tuesday night's raid. It is 2½ miles inside Jordan.

The raid was the first invasion of Jordan by Israeli ground forces in 21 months and was believed to be one of the longest since the six-day war in 1967.

The Amman newspaper Al Difaa said that first reports indicated that one person was killed in the attack and seven others were wounded, including a woman.

A car used by an anti-malaria team was damaged, it added.

NO MENTION

The Jordanian spokesman made no mention of casualties, nor did he estimate the size of the Israeli force.

The area was the scene of Palestinian Arab commando activity during the last two days and the Israeli potash plant at Sodom was shelled twice by the commandos who claimed to have caused heavy damage.

This was the first invasion by the Israeli forces since the battle of Karameh March 21, 1968. The Israelis then crossed the ceasefire line to attack alleged commando bases in the village which lies some three miles east of the River Jordan.

Jet Sale To Libya Confirmed

PARIS (AP) — France disclosed Wednesday it is selling 100 sophisticated jet fighters — double the number previously announced — to the fledgling air force of revolutionary Libya.

Libya in return agreed to stop supporting the rebellion in the African state of Chad where French Foreign Legionnaires are helping fight rebels.

Defence Minister Michel Debre revealed the new arms deal with Libya in a closed-door report to the National Assembly's defence committee.

Members disclosed to reporters the gist of Debre's speech.

In addition to 50 Mirage V jet fighters Libya will receive under a contract confirmed Jan. 9, the North African nation's 7,000-man armed forces will also obtain 30 Mirage II-E aircraft, and 20 training-reconnaisance aircraft. France sold 50 Mirage Vs to Israel but they are held here by an embargo imposed by France a year ago.

Some 2,000 French soldiers have been in operation in Chad since last August supporting President Francis Tombalbaye's troops against rebel tribesmen occupying some parts of the largely desert nation on Libya's southern border.

Anti-Pill Onslaught Continues

One called for government support of massive research at once.

"Research from these drugs was far from complete at the time they were released for public use," said Dr. J. Edwin Wood, director of the department of medicine at Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia.

Leary Convicted

LAREDO, Tex. (AP) — A jury of eight men and four women Tuesday convicted Dr. Timothy Leary, a middle-aged hippie-style drug advocate, on federal charges of illegally transporting marijuana.

"We're not angry about this," Leary said. "All we have to do is stay loving and keep cool."

Twelve Executed

Three retired army men and two active officers were executed by firing squad today and seven more executions were carried out in the evening.

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters) — A North Vietnamese embassy spokesman today refused to tell three American wives if their husbands, shot down over North Vietnam, were dead or alive.

Typhoid Tracing By Dyes Tried

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dyes have been put into the sewage system of the liner Oronsay as authorities continue to seek how the water supply of the P & O ship became contaminated with typhoid germs which have put 63 persons in hospital.

There have been suggestions rusted-out pipes might have allowed sewage contamination. Plans of alterations finished before the ship left England are being used in efforts to trace the source of the infection.

But the fact of the contamination did not rule out that there might be a carrier of the disease among the passengers or crew, Dr. David Thompson, regional director of medical services for the federal health department, said Tuesday.

He added it could take up to another 20 days to isolate the typhoid carrier.

As it is, the medical costs for fecal tests of the 1,500 passengers and crew alone have passed $10,000 and "we're not finished yet," said Dr. G. R. F. Elliot, deputy provincial health official.

COSTS MOUNT DAILY

Other costs have mounted daily as the ship flew a quarantine flag for the seventh day. Provincial and federal health officials said they were considering who would pay the bill for other costs incurred.

About 20 of those hospitalized have confirmed cases of the infectious fever, centred in the gall bladder. Ten more persons were taken to hospital Tuesday.

Company authorities have made no decision on when to continue their cruise from Britain to Hawaii and Australia. The cruise was interrupted a week ago when the Oronsay docked here to pick up passengers.

More than 100 provincial personnel are at work on the tests, trying to pinpoint a carrier or other source of the disease.

The discovery of salmonella bacteria in fecal specimens of quarantined persons reinforced suspicions that the ship's water supply was polluted before it docked here.

Officials in Florida said no trace of the disease has been detected among 31 Floridians who disembarked from the Oronsay in late December at Port Everglades.

One crewman flown to London with a back injury subsequently proved to have typhoid. Six are in hospital in California.

Fast-Buckers 'Using Stars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators studying the $90,000,000,000 franchise industry have been told some sports and show business celebrities have sold their names to fast-buck promoters of dubious enterprises.

And some small businessmen have suffered serious financial losses by yielding to the attraction of a nationally known figure to invest in untried franchise operations, a witness testified before the Senate urban and rural economic development subcommittee.

In testimony prepared for today's hearing, Denver business consultant Thomas H. Murphy called for legislation requiring full disclosure of the terms of contracts between big-name celebrities and the franchise companies who trade on glamor to promote their operations.

"These national figures are promoting fields they know nothing about," Brown testified Tuesday. "They have no background or experience and they are playing on the emotions of public idolatry for their own profit. The small businessman who risks his life-long savings to join with them as business partners is the one who suffers.

Security Deposits Ordered

The provincial cabinet has approved land reclamation programs for 12 strip-mining operations including the Utah Mining and Construction Company's Vancouver Island copper mine.

A total of $785,000 in security deposits will have to be put up by the 12 companies before mining permits are issued.

Utah's deposit will be $110,000 for its multi-million dollar operation near Port Hardy.

The company's application to dump effluent into Rupert Inlet is being held up by the government pending completion of a water pollution study in March.

The study, commissioned last week by Resources Minister Ray Williston, deals with the effect of mining waste on fresh and salt water.

HEADACHE PILL CAN 'OVERKILL'

Victoria's hospitals are switching to a new headache pill formula deleting a common ingredient which some doctors think can kill if taken in extreme quantity.

It is thought to be capable of causing irreversible kidney damage if taken in large doses over long periods of time.

Both Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals are phasing out all pills containing phenacetin as new supplies become available.

But doctors here are concerned about the sale of the phenacetin-bearing pills over the counter to the public and want them banned by the federal government.

Dr. William Mahon, clinical pharmacologist at Toronto General Hospital, today joined the campign urging Ottawa to take phenacetin off the market as an "over-the-counter" medication.

★ ★ ★

The length of hospital stays are too short to pose any substantial problem with the pills but many patients continue to take them after discharge, Jubilee administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles said Tuesday.

Up to 100 pills a week have been taken by some persons at home, added Victoria Medical Society president Dr. J. F. Higgins.

He said the evidence of kidney damage from phenacetin is "circumstantial" but persuasive enough that the society believes it should be declared a restricted drug so it cannot be sold without prescription, even when only a component of a headache pill.

The B.C. Medical Association's pharmacy committee has been successful in persuading hospitals in the province to start restocking their shelves with phenacetin-free headache pills ordered from manufacturers.

But so far the federal food and drug directorate has not declared the ingredient a restricted drug.

The first shipment to B.C. of the new headache pills arrived at Vancouver General Hospital Monday. It will begin appearing in Victoria hospitals in a few days and likely will become available in drug stores this summer.

NDP WON'T BACK MURRAY FOR POST

Clash Over Speaker to Mar Opening

By BRUCE YEMEN

The opening of the legislature Thursday will be marred by controversy over the election of a speaker.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett announced Tuesday afternoon that the New Democratic Party is unable to support the election of William H. Murray (SC — Prince Rupert), speaker for the past six years.

The NDP move is believed unprecedented in the legislature.

The government can go ahead and nominate Murray without the customary seconding of the motion by the leader of the opposition. The opposition has a choice of remaining silent, registering its objection by voice "yeas and nays" — or by formal division.

The opposition could also insist on a debate on the motion, which could delay progress of the formal opening for some time. It is believed that debate would be limited to one or two speakers for each party under parliamentary rules.

Decision not to support Murray in the speakership came as no surprise. He was the target of bitter criticism following an end-of-session censure of Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) on a motion by Herb Capozzi (SC — Vancouver Centre) on April 3 last year.

The motion resulted in Dowding being suspended from the legislature for the balance of the session.

Capozzi's charge against him was that Dowding's Vancouver law firm was paid to shepherd a bill through the legislature's private bills committee in 1966.

Dowding was a member of that committee but at the time of the case in question he disclosed his interest in the firm and withdrew from the deliberations.

Murray was strongly criticized for his handling of the motion. Liberal MLAs turned their backs on him in the legislature to show their feelings.

Barrett said Bennett called him Tuesday and was invited to Barrett's office to discuss the question of a speaker.

When he arrived, Barrett said he "informed him that it was not possible for us to support the member for Prince Rupert (Murray) as speaker."

Barrett said he would have more to say on the matter in the legislature at "the earliest opportunity."

Court Asked To Stop Tug Tie-Up

An order to restrain Canadian Merchant Service Guild from interfering with the operations of its new $4.5 million coastal tug Island Valiant will be sought by Island Tug and Barge Ltd. in B.C. Supreme Court Friday.

The writ has been filed with the court in Vancouver, where a hearing is scheduled to take place.

Valiant has been tied up here since the weekend when the Merchant Service Guild ordered its members not to serve as crew, apparently because it disagrees with the manning and horsepower of the 75-foot towboat.

Guild representative Gordon Mercer revealed the action at a public meeting with federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, held Monday in Union Centre.

He said the tug was sailing with a crew of five, none of which is an engineer.

Island Tug said the vessels represent the latest in remote-controlled operation, thereby eliminating the need of an engineer.

Meanwhile, J. Rod Lindsay, of Vancouver, president of B.C. Towboat Owners Association, called Mackasey's remarks about "cleaning up the industry" intemperate. They could sabotage joint industry-government efforts to improve tug safety, he said.

Mackasey told his audience Monday of a special team of inspectors who had surveyed 55 coastal tugs since last summer, finding evidence of "deplorable conditions" on some.

The cabinet order approving the plans describes them as "a program for the protection and reclamation of the surface of the land and watercourses to be affected by their operations."

Largest security deposit is $165,000 to be put up by Kaiser Resources Ltd. Fording Coal Ltd will have to pay $150,000 as security on its reclamation plans.

Others getting approval were Endako Mines, $115,000; Bethlehem Copper Corporation, $75,000; Brenda Mines Ltd., $50,000; Granby Mining Company, $40,000; Granisle Copper Ltd., $30,000; B.C. Molybdenum Ltd., $25,000; Wesfrob Mines and Cominco Ltd. (Pinchi Lake operations), $10,000 each; and Red Mountain Mines Ltd., $5,000.

B.C. Dragnet For Two Convicts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police were watching airports, bus stations, and border points today in the continuing search for two men who escaped from the British Columbia penitentiary Monday night.

Police said they believed the escapees, Murray Boyd, 31 and Raymond Palmer, 33, were armed. They warned that extreme caution should be used in apprehending the men if they were located.

. . . HORROR OF BIAFRA

"They have no food, their money is useless and we have no way of getting anything for them."

REDUCED TO BEGGING

The once proud Ibos, who through education and ambition had moved farther up the ladder of progress than Nigeria's 200 other tribes, were reduced to begging, with outstretched hands by the roadside, and fighting and clawing at each other when a food bag fell off a truck or broke at a feeding station.

Such scenes were repeated endlessly in the 150-mile tour of Ibo land. For all Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon's good intentions, it did not seem that the Nigerian army and the government relief machinery could begin coping with the problem.

Uli airstrip, except for a few potholes, seemed to be in excellent condition. But it was deserted save for the rusting carcasses of at least six planes bombed in their parking bays in the final federal siege.

"We used to get 40 planes a night, now we get nothing," said Ekwensi. "It is imperative that the government use the existing relief agencies."

But the government has barred all foreign relief agencies that helped Biafra.

'WE'LL BUILD ANOTHER'

"It was built by the rebels," he said. "We would never think of using it. We will build a better airfield."

At many places along the road Nigerian soldiers were wearing two and three wrist watches and loading furniture and bedding from empty houses onto trucks. Refugees complained constantly of looting.

"All I have left is these rags you see on my back," said Godfrey Mazeli, standing outside his empty hut in Okporo. "They came, beat up my wife and took everything. Yesterday they wanted to take this one for their pleasure," he added, pointing to his obviously pregnant daughter.

"An officer came and we stopped them, so instead they went across the way and took my neighbor's wife. She had had a baby only 15 days ago."

At one point in the trip, on the road between Owerri and Orlu, the international observers team was making an inspection of the surrendered territories.

'RAPE DOESN'T KILL'

A team member said the observers had only so far received "second hand information on rape cases. . . . Our main interest is the question of genocide: you don't wipe out the Ibo race by rape. In fact, quite the contrary."

Although many social workers from the church agencies declared persona non grata and many of the Irish missionaries had been moved to Port Harcourt and detained under guard, quite a few were still operating in the field and optimistic about staying.

"We want to stay on, we don't feel we've done anything wrong except to stay with our parishioners to help them stay alive," said Father McMahon, adding that his own town of Mbieri had been taken without a shot and that the soldiers were courteous.

Asked about repeated protests to the reporters by refugees about rape and looting, Father McMahon shook his head: "These sort of things happen in war, there's really nothing new in it."

POLICE TAKE OVER

Rev. Thomas Maguire, from Dublin, said the initial chaos had abated, soldiers had returned to their barracks and the Nigerian police had taken over administration of the towns.

At a depot outside Owerri, a Swiss relief worker, Monica Stander, had tears in her eyes as she pulled and tugged at a scrimmage pile-up of children and old men and women over a sack of wheat that had fallen and burst open.

The were no dogs or cats around, most of them having gone the way of the war diet, but enterprising Hausa tribesmen from the north already had driven some cattle down by foot over the roads and a few scrawny chickens were scratching about.

. . . CHILDREN

The inhabitants of Owerri say there was no killing by Nigerian troops after the war ended, as they had been led to expect by their exiled former leader, Odumegwu Ojukwu.

There are, however, widespread complaints that soldiers are looting and molesting girls in former Biafran villages, and several soldiers tried to abduct a young wife in view of several foreign correspondents here today.

Col. Impola Ainrinade, the young commandant of Owerri, said: "I don't think it is true there has been general looting and raping. In every war, you will find odd soldiers who behave this way."

He said a Nigerian soldier had been shot two days ago when caught molesting a girl. As he spoke, Nigerian troops were beating back starving Ibos trying to reach relief supplies stored in a compound here.

TEAM VISITS ORLU

The four-nation observer team of Sweden, Canada, Poland and Britain—invited by Nigeria during the war to report on complaints of alleged atrocities—today was visiting Orlu, the last secessionist town to fall to federal forces.

Asked about widesrpead allegations made here of rape and looting by Nigerian soldiers, Brig.-Gen. John Drewry of Canada said he did not consider it serious.

He said 10 cases of rape at the same time and at the same spot might be worth investigating. But, aside from that, rape was something that sometimes happened in war. On looting, he said: "I don't know if it has been looting or something that has been thrown away."

In a children's hospital a few miles from Uli, once the air lifeline to Biafra, dying children look at visitors with eyes that are imploring, accusing or all-knowing.

There are 900 children in the hospital, with 300 "worse cases" expected from another hospital Thursday, and only three doctors—two of them British—and seven nurses.

Children with distended bellies stand in the sun, some wearing an identity tag bearing a number. These have been separated from their parents and their names are not known.

But there is a babies' "death ward" where children bearing the white-flecked skin characteristic of kwashiorkor sit or lie listelessly on the floor.

Law Reform Commission Increased

New full-time and part-time members have been appointed to the B.C. Law Reform Commission, Attorney-General Peterson announced today.

Leon Getz, associate professor of law at University of B.C., becomes a full-time member effective May 1 at an annual salary of $17,500.

Frank Collier, Vancouver lawyer, joins the commission on a part-time basis at the same time at a salary of $6,000.

Former federal justice minister E. Davie Fulton is chairman of the commission and former Queen's University law professor Richard Gosse has been a full-time member since Jan. 1.

"We have assembled one of the finest teams of legal brains for this commission that Canada has ever knwon," said Peterson.

The commission was established by the government last year to carry out studies toward the overhaul of provincial laws.

UBCM Seeks Hydro Boost Examination

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Union of B.C. Municipalities called Tuesday for an independent tribunal to study the need for a proposed B.C. Hydro electricity rate increase.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, UBCM president, made the statement at a news conference after a two-hour meeting with Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum.

Hydro was urged to take the issue to some form of tribunal, such as the Public Utilities Commission. UBCM will allow some time for consideration of the idea by Hydro before pursuing further action.

Curtis said UBCM is not necessarily against an increase but it feels any increase must be justified to the consumers.

Tom Lokier In Hospital After Fall

Thomas Lokier, 2455 Hamiota, the 101-year-old namesake who donated the land for Oak Bay's Lokier Park, is under observation at Royal Jubilee Hospital following a tumble.

He incurred minor injuries Monday when he fell during a walk but hospital officials report he is in fairly good condition.

Truscott Gaining On Lost Decade

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Steven Truscott, paroled in October after a 10-year prison stay that began when he was 14, was stunned by the outside world.

"He couldn't stop talking about his experiences," George Street, chairman of the National Parole Board, said today.

"The first night he was out, he kept his parole officer up until four in the morning."

Mr. Street told a news conference that Truscott, living under an assumed name in a place not divulged, is doing "very well." He has a job and is writing a book about his past.

"Thanks to the press, he hasn't been badgered," Mr. Street said. "He is very anxious not to be recognized."

Truscott had been in jail or prison since his arrest for the sex-murder of Lynne Harper, 12, near Clinton, Ont.

He was 14 when a court sentenced him to death. The federal cabinet commuted the sentence to life imprisonment.

CONVICTION UPHELD

He has always maintained his innocence. The Supreme Court of Canada reviewed the case three years ago on government order but upheld the conviction.

Mr. Street said he expects things to work out for Truscott, as they do for 90 per cent of those on parole.

He described parole as a social safeguard that assures control of a released prisoner. It also helps the taxpayer, since it costs $5,000 a year to keep a man in a federal prison.

The board last year granted 4,700 paroles, or about 60 per cent of those applied for.

"About 65 per cent of those in prison aren't dangerous, vicious or violent," Mr. Street said. "But the dangerous offender should be kept in for long periods, if not for life.

"Half the crime is committed by one-quarter of the prisoners. These should be segregated."

they allow the fast-buck promoters to exploit their good names in order to promote unproven and questionable schemes," he said.

Brown, 36, who said his five-year-old company now has 2,700 outlets, 10,000 employees and earned $500,000,000 in gross sales in 1969, did not name the firms or personalities to whom he objected.

Chairman Harrison A. Williams Jr. (Dem. N.J.), whose subcommittee has scheduled five days of hearings on the franchise industry, said these persons will be on the witness list:

Minnie Pearl, the country and western comedienne-singer whose name is used for a fried chicken chain; New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath, whose name is associated with Broadway Joe's Restaurants; Brady Keys, former professional football player who is president of All-Pro Chicken; and Hilliard Elkins, a theatrical producer who is the franchisor of Oh, Calcutta and Alice's Restaurant.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Sometimes doctors blame the weather for a heart attack in one of their patients. When the relative humidity is higher and there is a sharp increase in barometric pressure there has been found to be a sharp increase in the number of patients with coronary thrombosis.

Your heart muscle depends on your blood for its sustenance. When it doesn't get enough blood, when the arteries supplying blood to the heart are plugged by clots, the heart dies. Doctors call the death a coronary occlusion.

It may be that diet sometimes has something to do with a heart attack, or that terrible strain on a diseased heart kills it—and it may be that the weather can trigger a heart attack. Doctors think that more humidity and more barometric pressure place a greater stress on the heart.

Granny's Daring Raid Frees Imprisoned Family

HONG KONG (AP) — A 47-year-old grandmother told today how she made a single-handed raid on a Communist Chinese commune, freed her imprisoned husband and two children and another family of eight, and brought them all back to Hong Kong.

"She is a brave and wonderful woman," said Leung Ngau as his wife told of sailing a fishing junk 100 miles along the Chinese coast, creeping past the guards and into the commune after dark and finding her husband and children with the help of directions smuggled out to her by relatives in Canton.

Leung, a Hong Kong fisherman, and his children were captured when a Chinese gunboat seized their junk 18 months ago in Deep Bay, between China and Hong Kong.

Leung said they were taken to the Poon Yu commune, near Canton on the Pearl River estuary.

Mrs. Leung said she learned about two months ago where the Communists were holding her 49-year-old husband, their daughter Sui-keun, 15, and their son Ming, 13.

Obtaining a small fishing junk, she loaded it with food and water, sailed westward out of Hong Kong and then up the estuary.

"I hid the junk in a little inlet, like a cave almost, and waited until it was dark. Then I crept up to the commune, past some guards to the detention house that had been described for me in the letter from my relatives."

The woman told of anxious minutes as she struggled with a large bolt that held the door shut from the outside.

"I pulled and tugged and twisted the bolt, but it would not come loose.

"Finally it came free with a loud metal screeching and the door creaked open loudly.

"My husband came out the door and put his arms around me. Over his shoulder I could see the children and they looked all right.

"I started to lead them back to where the junk was hidden, but then my husband told me about a family in the commune, with the same name but not relatives, who had been good to him and the children and who wanted to escape to Hong Kong.

"So we went to their hut and all of them—the husband, wife, and six children—came with us without even stopping to pick up any extra clothes.

"We reached the junk by crawling past some guards, then sailed back to Hong Kong. Here we are and that is all there is to tell."

UNLOVED 'MUFFIN'

Tough as Nails—At 14

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fourteen years after her birth, Debra Mattingly—everyone called her "Muffin"—could say she'd been around.

She had known detention homes, summer camps, courtrooms, hippie crash pads—everything, in short, but stability.

So it was easy, when Muffin Mattingly was charged last week with the murder of her adoptive father, a District of Columbia minor official, to quote her friends that she was "tough as nails, the kind of chick who eats nails."

The newspaper pictures—a short, fair girl looking much older than 14, dragging on a cigarette, dressed in old jeans, sweatshirt and mackinaw jacket—made you forget that Muffin Mattingly was still a child.

DEBRA MATTINGLY

VICTIM STRANGLED

And it took a few more questions to elicit the information that for all her tough, dirty talk, her love for motorcycles, her fondling of knives, Muffin Mattingly was really a sad little girl who had been kicked around almost since birth.

Also charged with the Jan. 8 murder in the suburban Arlington, Va., home, where Richard L. Mattingly apparently was strangled by having a crowbar pressed against his throat, are two of the wandering young men whose noisy, free lifestyle drew Muffin into their circle.

Muffin and her two co-defendants are being held under bail totalling $130,000—the men in jail, the girl in a juvenile home.

Muffin's parents, destitute, gave her up for adoption when she was only nine months old. Mattingly, an official of the District of Columbia Board of Condemnation was sued for separation five times by his wife. She succeeded the sixth time, in 1962, and Muffin went with her.

When she died, the girl rejoined Mattingly, and for the next three years life was a succession of runaways and wanderings.

Dead or Alive, a Legend Terrorizes Thai Jungle

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — In the jungle and forest country on both sides of the Thai-Malaysian border, 10,000 troops and police are looking for a legend named Chin Peng.

Although neither Thai nor Malaysian auhorities are sure Chin Peng is alive, they believe the wily Communist guerrilla leader is the man behind the growing terrorism, ambushes and unrest that have swept southern Thailand and parts of neighboring Malaysia in recent months.

The Thai government has ordered martial law enforced in nine provinces bordering Malaysia and sent reinforcements to the scene. The Thais, using techniques learned from two years' fighting in Vietnam, sweep the jungles in search of the guerrilla force. Malaysian air force jets and artillery blast suspected hideouts along the border.

The situation has awakened memories of a 12-year guerrilla war fought in Malaya by Chin Peng. The war, known euphemistically as the Malayan emergency, was put down finally in 1960 with the large-scale aid of British and Australian forces. It cost 11,000 lives.

HIDING IN THAILAND

Since then, Chin Peng and the remnants of his guerrillas are believed to have holed up in Thailand, drawing support from the large Chinese community and biding their time.

Reports from the joint Thai Malaysian headquarters in Songkhla indicate the guerrillas now number about 1,000 men, compared with 500 two years ago. Thai army officers say the guerrillas have started a recruiting campaign through a Chinese youth organization.

The terrorist force seems well equipped with weapons and has shown expertise in staging ambushes and mining roads. Thai forces have uncovered jungle camps capable of accommodating up to 200 men. Some had kitchens, dispensaries, parade grounds and even basketball courts.

Chin Peng was born 47 years ago in Malaya, the second son of a bicycle dealer who had emigrated from Fukien province in China. He studied at a Methodist missionary school but left school at 15 and almost immediately joined the Malayan Communist party.

FOUGHT JAPANESE

With the Japanese invasion of Malaya, Chin Peng took to the jungle as leader on the Malayan People's Anti-Japanese Army, mostly men of Chinese extraction.

No More Kidding

IT IS BEING SUGGESTED IN some quarters that although Canada should not enter into any agreements with the United States now for export of water or power resources, such agreements might be feasible in the future. Nothing could be more fallacious.

The reason we should not give or trade away our water resources today is that we have no idea of the eventual extent of our national need for this wealth. Equally obviously we can guess at the answer: our future needs will be unlimited. For who could possibly predict that a country in our present preliminary state of development will eventually need exactly X billion units of electric power or gallons of pure water, and so everything surplus to those amounts may be sold across the border?

It is clear that no such arbitrary lid can be placed on Canada's ultimate development, population or resource needs. It is thus meaningless to intimate that a little later on we may be in a position to dicker with the United States about water sales. No one can say with even an appearance of sense that Canada will grow to such and such a size, someday, with such and such requirements for water and energy, but no larger. To raise the question is to show its irrelevance.

Any future for Canada which embraces the continental principle of sharing natural resources implies a Canada which is not a sovereign country or even an economic entity. With our northern rivers and lakes pumped southward to feed the teeming populations and omnivorous industries of the United States; with our oil, natural gas, minerals and other resources going into the North American pot as long as they last, this country would be only a storehouse, a pantry, for the booming industrial nation to the south which with its vast plants and production units has a world-embracing head start in techniques, processes and large-scale assembly of capital and equipment.

Much of our industry and resources is dominated today by United States control. This control was acquired legitimately: we sold it. But it is unrealistic to expect that the foreign corporations in charge of our oil, coal, iron, copper, manufacturing plants and other assets will make their business decisions on the basis of the preservation of Canadian nationality. They will order their affairs on the basis of economic gain, and any national aspirations we now hold will have to be preserved and implemented by the Canadian people themselves. Maintaining full control of our water, and such other resources as we can still claim, may well be the deciding factor in safeguarding our national identity.

Our home our native land should not be put on the block either wholly or in pieces. No elected minister in this country should entertain any hazy ideas about that, or make statements which are not crystal clear regarding the secure future of our water for drinking, sailing through, fishing in or using to spin turbines.

Is the Hangman Obsolete?

BRITAIN'S HOUSES OF PARliament have voted to abolish capital punishment despite inconclusive evidence from two studies as to whether the death penalty is an effective deterrent to murder. According to the "hanging lobby" there were 67 capital murders in the four years preceding the trial ban compared with 154 murders since the 1962 suspension. While noting the increase in capital murders, authors of the study caution against jumping to conclusions: "The figures since 1965 are inevitably over-estimated since offences are classified as capital on the basis of circumstances on which doubt might have been thrown in the course of trial if capital murder had been an issue."

In support of the study's caution, the total United Kingdom murder rate — three per million population — was no higher in 1968 than it was in 1959. But the authors stated that the trial period of abolition was far too short to provide final answers. They added that evidence examined from Canada and Great Britain points to the conclusion that capital punishment itself is irrelevant to the murder rate.

No murderer has been executed in Canada since 1962 although partial abolition of the death penalty has been law here only since late 1967. In the first six months of the trial period 141 murders occurred, compared with 122 for the similar period the year before. The British example indicates that our own evidence is far too fragmentary to make a final decision regarding capital punishment. Those opposing capital punishment attribute the rise in Canadian murders to a general increase in the crime rate. Although no statistics are available on the number of murder-suicides, it can be argued that a person intent on taking his own life will not be deterred by the death penalty.

But the moral issue involved in capital punishment is more complicated than the statistics. Human judgment is not perfect and there is some doubt that we should punish crimes in a way that cannot be rescinded if our initial decision proves erroneous. It is worthwhile noting that we have no information which confirms the death penalty as an effective deterrent to murder. And there still remains a moral doubt in the minds of many persons as to the right of society to execute human beings.

Full-Time All the Time

RECENT CRITICISM OF PRIME Minister Trudeau's use of a government jet plane for private purposes is hardly relevant to the age in which we live. The head of a nation of Canada's size must be available for public business day and night the year through no matter where he may be. If an emergency arises in which his presence in Ottawa is essential—and this can easily happen—there must be no time lost in waiting in foreign airports for accommodation on a commercial aircraft.

For the same reason, a prime minister cannot be expected to receive and transmit official messages, study official papers and dictate letters in a commercial airliner, even if he reserves first-class seats. The fact is that a prime minister's job is a full-time one, and he must be provided with the proper facilities to carry out his duties. The only other alternative would be a complete ban on all absences from Ottawa, and no human being could stand the pressures of national office without periodic breathing spells. We need only look at the progressive photographs of presidents of the United States to see—as in the case of President Roosevelt or President Eisenhower—the rapid aging of incumbents in only two or three years under the often intolerable weight of responsibility.

That means time off occasionally in a refreshing environment while still retaining the means of immediate return. And in the twentieth century, that means use of a government jet plane.

Round 29 coming up

FROM QUEBEC

By RICHARD PURSER

Bourassa: The Possibilities Are Immense

IF the election of Robert Bourassa as Quebec Liberal leader means anything, and it is by no means yet certain that it does, it is that the age of romantic nonsense is coming to an end in Quebec politics. One can only hope. As Mr. Bourassa said in a mercifully short acceptance speech (mercifully short because it interfered only slightly with the Saturday night hockey game on television, which no Quebec politician would lightly interrupt), the big thing now is to win the next election.

Purser

It is easy to say that the Liberals under dynamic new leadership — if that is what Mr. Bourassa is really going to provide — cannot help but win an election against Quebec's confused and bumbling National Union government. But there is an enormous reservoir of conservatism in Quebec; some of it formerly found a home in the Liberal party, which despite its name is far from unencrusted with Quebec traditionalism. Now there is no home for the hidebound conservative but with the National Union.

This is of some importance electorally. Although Quebec, like most other areas of modern political jurisdiction, is predominantly urban, its electoral districts are still unrepresentatively rural.

Urban-based as the Liberal party is, its rural wing is nevertheless well established and figures prominently in the close give and take between the two provincial parties. And the rural wing is conservative in the Quebec sense of being oriented toward home, family and church, and thinking of politics in the what - can - my-member-do-for-me-today sense.

Conservatism in Quebec does not mean pro-business orientation, as it often does in Anglo-Saxon politics. Progressive business in Quebec is solidly with the very un-conservative Bourassa because he thinks in terms of economic progress.

The combination of youth and technocracy, which the Liberal convention evidently considered a necessity for Quebec, will not sit well with all voters. It will be a sharp contest, but the National Union is automatically on the defensive and it will be up to Mr. Bourassa to make the most of his belief that Quebec will be better served by the application of expertise, especially economic, than by the mouthing of slogans about its national destiny.

The trouble is Mr. Bourassa, while the perfect image of the impatient young technocrat, hasn't yet shown himself to be much of a politician. He did a good job of sewing up the convention delegates, but this was a specialized task. The Liberal party militants are not necessarily a microcosm of the Quebec voting public. Mr. Bourassa has a much larger scale selling job to do, and little time in which to do it.

No Orator

But he is, unfortunately, a miserable speaker. In a province where political oratory is highly valued and intently heard, Mr. Bourassa is flat, unemotional, uninspiring and repetitious. His speeches have common sense, but lack political sense.

Had votes been susceptible to being swayed by Saturday's final speeches, Mr. Bourassa might not have won so easily. Claude Wagner and Pierre Laporte orated circles around him. But on the other hand, Mr. Bourassa made no specific mistakes, while the others did and so possibly destroyed their own effectiveness with a few ill-chosen words.

Mr. Wagner remarked cynically that the most important thing in politics was to get power (which he suggested was his own forte), and Mr. Laporte ill-advisedly harped once again on Mr. Bourassa being a tool of the financial barons.

Mr. Bourassa is too cool to slip into that kind of gutter. But it remains to be seen whether the Bourassa cool is any match for the inflammatory declamation of which any experienced National Union politician is so capable on the hustings.

Now for Performance

It may be gathered from the above that the Quebec Liberal convention was not a very rousing event. It wasn't, and it is a pity if the television viewers were bored. But it doesn't really matter so much. Robert Bourassa is the leader, all Quebec knows it, and all Quebec is fascinated by him and wants to see him do his stuff.

His technique, so far at least, has been to stress bread and butter issues in the most straightforward manner possible and to ignore, or even sneer at, nationalistic preoccupations.

It's all rather unorthodox, but Mr. Bourassa's election as party leader was itself unorthodox and one cannot say that it is not a sign of fundamental changes in the social attitudes of Quebec.

Quebec these days does not subject itself to easy analysis, and rapid judgments about the emergence of Mr. Bourassa would be ill-advised. But the possibilities inherent in his leadership are immense and Quebec politics are bound to be even more fascinating than usual this year.

Able Host For Games

Globe and Mail

Talents are not for burying.

With Expo 67, the city of Montreal and its Mayor Jean Drapeau demonstrated an unequalled talent for the great international festival. They didn't do it all by themselves. They had vast amounts of help, both material and creative, from the rest of Quebec and the rest of Canada and the international community. But the fact remains that they sparked the spirit that made Expo 67 the unusually exciting experience that it was and—more important and even more unusual—they made it a happy experience for the millions who attended. Visitors, remembering, will mention the architecture, the magnificence of particular exhibits, and then they will almost always add, "And everyone was so happy."

To play the host so successfully, in a world so divided as ours, is not a small talent.

It is, indeed, a talent that should be in exercise again. There will be those Canadians who will resent, in sour-grapes fashion, Montreal's bid for the 1976 Olympics, who will hope that the bid will fail, who will grudge any federal money that goes into it if it succeeds. That will be a small-minded and short-sighted reaction. Canada benefitted enormously, both in spirit and in pocket, from Expo 67; we should all hope, and work, to do the same from Olympics 76.

The benefits would be many, and some of them would have peculiar significance for Canada.

The most obvious would, of course, be those realized from enjoying the international focus which playing host to the Olympic Games always provides. These include the visible dividends of tourist dollars, the less visible ones of heightened national pride and international identity.

But there could be other gains to the Canadian community.

Montreal particularly and the province of Quebec generally are at present in a recession. This is in part a result of a natural drop in activity after the extreme efforts which culminated in 1967 with Expo, and in part a reaction by business and industry to the separatism that boiled up when the fair ended. The situation is dangerous for national unity, since division always feeds on deprivation. Whether or not the Olympics come to Montreal, it is probable that help will have to be channelled to Quebec from Ottawa.

It would be far more healthy if this assistance came as the by-product of a great creative undertaking, as an investment, rather than as an increase in equalization payments or some other direct payment.

The effect, moreover, would be to make the overt expression of separatism unpopular, as it was during Expo when such expression was successfully contained. The great majority of the Quebec people do not want to leave Canada. In the hopeful business of working toward a great event in 1976, with all the prosperity that it would spread around, the strength of this majority would be bolstered, the strength of the dissidents would be diminished.

Protecting the Citizen

I recently followed, in your paper, the coverage of a court case in Vancouver in which an automobile dealer was acquitted on a charge of turning back automobile mileage. The dismissing issue seemed to be that the firm was not responsible for the action of its employees.

Is not the basis of our code of law the protection of the individual citizen? Surely loopholes should not exist. — Dan Williams, 340 Island Highway.

Where the GP Is

In reply to the letter of January 14 "Whatever Happened to the GP?" I was amazed to learn that in this beautiful city which has the highest complement of doctors anywhere in Canada per capita that the writer suffers to go to one of these assembly line clinics. There are numerous young GPs with extensive postgraduate training in many fields of medicine practising alone because they wish to look after the whole person or family as against one particular area.

I am aquainted with a family physician whose day starts around 7 a.m. He may assist at major operations or perform minor operations, make hospital rounds and do any urgent house calls arriving home at about 12 p.m. for lunch. His office opens at 1 p.m. with a variety of problems. There are times when he is called away to the hospital. Patients don't always have coronaries, babies and road accidents out of office hours. The office finishes at about 6:30, often later because of couples with marital problems and adolescents with parental problems. He believes that family counselling is very important as part of being a family doctor. After this there are phone calls to make for prescriptions for drugs for minor colds and sore throats or people who wish to have a housecall made.

He also has histories to write up on patients in hospital and rounds to make that he didn't do in the morning. Also patients who have to be referred to specialists (no man knows it all and every family doctor should hopefully know his limitations) have to have letters written about them. The house-calls are made and he arrives home between 10 and 11 most evenings, has dinner and then retires to bed, hoping the phone doesn't ring during the night because tomorrow is just another busy day.

You may wonder how I know so much about this particular physician. I happen to be married to him and waiting eargerly for my dinner (it is 10:30 p.m.).—LOOK UNDER THE YELLOW PAGES.

Exhaust Fumes

Air pollution is presently and rightly on everyone's mind these days. If nothing can be done about such impersonal companies as the CPR and B.C. Forest Products, might I suggest we look to ourselves first.

Private cars are, we are told, the worst offenders. As yet we cannot rule them off the road, but very little if anything is done to even minimize the exhaust fumes, and some cars contribute far more than others. To be fair most drivers are unaware how their particular car is in this respect and many would do something about it if they did know.

I am told there are gadgets sold somewhere in the USA that can cut down on any car's exhaust fumes. Though not perfect I am told they are not expensive and every little bit helps. Why are these gadgets not available here?

Secondly, those cars which are the worst offenders have a curable defect — we should insist these be rectified.

As all cars have to go to the testing station every six months I would like to suggest that the matter of excessive exhaust fumes be checked there. — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria.

Rape of Gonzales

Very few spots in our beautiful city are left where one can have a better commanding view over the whole Greater Victoria area, than from the lookout on Gonzales Hill. Lately, out of sight and without publicity, the rape of this lovely hill has taken place.

Some promoter got the idea and permission to blast a road in between Walbran Park and the lookout, to get hold of some six building lots which will strangle that lookout like fingers around the throat of a person being choked. It all started when, a few years back, houses on stilts were built on the west side below the observatory and along the entrance of the park.

It must be plain stupidity by the elected council members of the municipality concerned, who no doubt gave permission and could not see, that now and forever this land has been lost and the rape completed. — Walter Lissetz, 501 Richmond.

No Rough Time

The coverage your correspondent Bob Mitchell provided of the Pollution Symposium organized by students of Oak Bay Senior Secondary was excellent, but the headline writer missed the point entirely when he suggested that the students gave Mr. Roy, the chief process engineer at the Harmac plant of MacMillan Bloedel, a rough time. They did nothing of the kind; in fact, they listened attentively and sympathetically to his explanations.

Mr. Roy was in a difficult position as a member of this panel, but he handled his delicate assignment with ease and confidence and left an impression of great personal charm and sincerity. Judging by the reactions of the students I talked to afterwards, MacMillan Bloedel could not have found a better spokesman — W. J. Havelaar, Oak Bay Senior Secondary School.

Looking Back

From the Times of Jan. 21, 1910:

The trade of Canada for December totalled $72,527,465, an increase of $21,000,000 over the preceding December. The imports totalled $30,744,900, an increase of $8,500,000. Exports totalled $38,000,000, an increase of $12,500,000. For nine months of the fiscal year trade totalled $512,500,600, an increase of $73,000,000.

'Wave of Future Rising Before Us'

By ARTHUR C. CLARKE

(From an address given by the British science writer to a UNESCO conference on space communication in Paris last month.)

One of the results of future developments in communications technology will be a breakdown of the barriers between home and school, home and university — for in a sense the whole world may become one academy of learning — and even between home and place of work.

During the next decade we will see coming into the home a general purpose communications console comprising TV screen, camera, microphone, computer keyboard and hard-copy readout device.

Through this, anyone will be able to be in touch with any other person similarly equipped. As a result, for an ever-increasing number of people — in fact, virtually everyone of the executive level and above — almost all travel for business will become unnecessary.

Recently, a limited number of the executives of the Westinghouse Corporation who were provided with primitive forerunners of this device, promptly found that their travelling decreased by 20 per cent.

This, I am convinced, is how we are going to solve the traffic problem — and thus, indirectly, the problem of air pollution. More and more, the slogan of the future will be, "Don't Commute — Communicate."

▣

It usually takes a genius to see the obvious, and I am indebted to Professor Buckminster Fuller for the following ideas. One of the most important consequences of today's space research will be the development of life-support, and above all, food regeneration systems for long-duration voyages and for the establishment of bases on the Moon and planets. It is going to cost billions of dollars to develop these techniques, but when they are perfected they will be available to everyone.

This means that we will be able to establish self-contained communities quite independent of agriculture anywhere on this planet that we wish; perhaps one day even individual homes may become autonomous — closed ecological systems producing all their food and other basic requirements indefinitely.

This development, coupled with the communications explosion, means a total change in the structure of society. But because of the inertia of human institutions, and the gigantic capital investments involved, it may take a century or more for the trend to come to its inevitable conclusion. That conclusion is the death of the city.

We all know that our cities are obsolete, and much effort is now going into patching them up so that they work after some fashion, like 30-year-old automobiles held together with string and wire. But we must recognize that in the age that is coming the city — except for certain limited applications — is no longer necessary.

The nightmare of overcrowding and traffic jams which we now endure is going to get worse, perhaps for our lifetimes. But beyond that is a vision of a world in which man is once again what he should be — a fairly rare animal, though in instant communication with all other members of his species.

Marshall McLuhan has coined the evocative phrase "the global village" to describe the coming society. I hope "the global village" does not really mean a global suburb, covering the planet from pole to pole.

Luckily, there will be far more space in the world of the future, because the land liberated at the end of the agricultural age — now coming to a close after 10,000 years — will become available for living purposes. I trust that much of it will be allowed to revert to wilderness, and that through this new wilderness will wander the electronic nomads of the centuries ahead.

It is perfectly obvious that the communications revolution will have the most profound influence upon that fairly recent invention, the nation-state. I am fond of reminding American audiences that their country was created only a century ago by two inventions. Before those inventions existed it was impossible to have a United States of America. Afterwards, it was impossible not to have it.

Those inventions, of course, were the railroad and the electric telegraph. Russia, China — in fact all modern states — could not possibly exist without them. Whether we like it or not — and certainly many people won't like it — we are seeing the next step in this process.

History is repeating itself one turn higher on the spiral. What the railroad and the telegraph did to continental areas 100 years ago, the jet plane and the communications satellite will soon be doing to the whole world.

Despite the rise of nationalism and the surprising resurgence of minority political and linguistic groups, this process may already have gone further than is generally imagined.

We see, particularly among the young, cults and movements which transcend all geographical borders. The so-called "jet set" is perhaps the most obvious example of this trans-national culture, but that involves only a small minority.

In Europe at least, the Volkswagen and Vespa sets are far more numerous and perhaps far more significant. The young Germans, Frenchmen, and Italians are already linked together by a common communications network, and are impatient with the naive and simple-minded nationalism of their parents which has brought so much misery to the world.

What we are now doing — whether we like it or not — indeed whether we wish to or not — is laying the foundation of the first global society. Whether the final planetary authority will be an analogue of the federal systems now existing in the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. I do not know.

I suspect that without any deliberate planning, such organizations as the world metrological and earth resources satellite system, and the world communications satellite system (of which INTELSAT is the precursor) will eventually transcend their individual components. At some time during the next century they will discover, to their great surprise, that they are really running the world.

There are many who will regard these possibilities with alarm or distaste, and may even attempt to prevent their fulfilment. I would remind them of the story of the wise king, Canute, who had his throne set upon the seashore so he could demonstrate to his foolish courtiers that even the king could not command the incoming tide.

The wave of the future is now rising before us. Wisdom lies in recognizing the inevitable — and co-operating with it. In the world that is coming, the Great Powers are not great enough.

Finally, let us look at our whole world — as we have already done through the eyes of our moon-bound cameras. I have made it obvious that it will be essentially one world — though I am not foolish or optimistic enough to imagine that it will be free from violence and even war. But more and more it will be recognized that all terrestrial violence is the concern of the police — and of no one else.

And there is another factor which will accelerate the unification of the world. Within another lifetime, this will not be the only world, and that fact will have profound psychological impact upon all humanity.

We have seen in this annus mirabilis of 1969 the imprint of man's first footstep on the Moon. Before the end of this century, we will experience the only other event of comparable significance in the foreseeable future.

Before I tell you what it is, ask yourselves what you would have thought of the moon landing, 30 years ago. Well, before another thirty have passed, we will see its inevitable successor — the birth of the first human child on another world, and the beginning of the real colonization of space. When there are men who do not look on Earth as home, then the men of Earth will find themselves drawing closer together.

A Free People Must Own The Nation They Live In

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

Drive down any highway and sooner or later you'll come to an automobile sales room where credit will be extended so that you can drive out in a new, $4,000 Polluter 500, the hottest thing on the road.

If you have any kind of a job, they'll give it to you for next to no money down. They don't even like it if you offer to pay cash.

The same thing holds true for TV sets, furniture, refrigerators, everything you use and want. There's a bank, a finance company, an insurance outfit panting to offer you credit at usurious rates of interest.

But what happens if you decide you don't want a new, 1970 Polluter 500? What happens if, instead, you want to buy $4,000 worth of IBM shares on the same terms?

You know, stock now, no money down, don't pay anything for three months. Blow that idea out of the other ear.

Stock brokers don't want you cluttering up their offices. They don't want little people bothering them. Too much paper work, not enough profit.

They don't even want to do business with you on an all-cash basis. Buying a share of stock has been converted into an arcane, bureaucratic and impossible process that most of us cannot participate in.

Strange Policy

That is a strange policy for businessmen who like to brag about how tough and practical they are. They're willing to lend money, they're actually out in the streets begging people to borrow money to buy perishable junk, while at the same time they make it as tough as possible to borrow money to buy something of real value that doesn't depreciate faster than it can be paid off.

The Polluter 500'll lose a third of its value the minute you drive it out of the door. It's a dead end machine; it's like an artillery shell, a product that can't create wealth.

Unlike a lathe or a computer or a drill press, machines that make other machines and products, the Polluter 500 manufactures nothing but smog and congestion.

Nevertheless, they'll lend as much money as you want to buy the brute, which is worthless as collateral, while making it as difficult as possible to buy a hunk of a computer company which is the best possible collateral in the world.

Hinkie-Dinkle

This set of anomalous practices was accepted as normal, natural and even desirable until they were examined by Louis O. Kelso. Kelso is a San Francisco economist of no professional standing whatsoever—perhaps because his books aren't dismal and can be read and understood without a slide rule. (Highly recommended is "Two-Factor Theory: The Economics of Reality" with Patricia Hetter, Vintage Paperback, $1.65).

While other economists play hinkie-dinkle with government deficits, interest rates, subsidies and welfare programs, Kelso has come up with some new ideas.

He points out that all credit is made available to us on the strength of our jobs, but that human labor accounts for the smaller and diminishing proportion of the effort that goes into creating wealth. It's the machines that make the money.

Consequently, the government must think up sillier and sillier jobs for people to do because their income is tied to the idea that you must have a job in order to get money, or, failing that you must be on welfare.

In either case, the money always comes in such a way that it must be spent on consumer items, on nonproductive machines like the Polluter 500. The result is constant inflation which is always threatening to get out of hand, but which we dare not stop for fear of a huge collapse.

None of that need to be, Kelso argues, if people's income were tied to the profits created by wealth-producing machines. In other words, if we were all capitalists, we'd have second incomes which would not be inflationary since they would not come from printing money but from the real profits manufactured by the machines which we own shares of.

Kelso points out that 95 per cent of the money big corporations use to pay for buying new machines comes, not from borrowing or selling new shares of stock, but from holding back profits. Ordinarily this would be an outrage to their stockholders but the tax laws are such they don't mind if they get low dividends. Mostly they're very rich and have other ways of getting their money from their stocks when they want it.

Kelso proposes certain changes in the tax laws that would compel big corporations to pay out all their profits to their stock holders. Thus when they wanted to buy new equipment or build a new factory they would have to borrow, and it's in this borrowing that Kelso hopes to make capitalists of us all.

Issue New Stock

Instead of going to a bank or an insurance company to get the money, under the Kelso system corporations would issue new stock which would be purchased by their employees and others.

Where would people get the money to buy the stock? From the banks and insurance companies who'd continue to make their standard profit, but now they wouldn't be lending money on dubious collateral like the Polluter 500 but on blue chip, absolutely sound stocks.

Assuming that the new capitalist decided to pay for $20,000 worth of stock by applying all dividends to his bank loan, he would, within five to seven years, have a "portfolio of diversified top grade securities, capable on the average of yielding an income of about $80 per week or about $4,000 per year under current conditions."

Under this system the new capitalist would still have money to buy his Polluter 500 if he were so inclined, but he would have more than that.

He would have a lessening dependence on his job and with that would come a lessening of the present irresistible political pressure to pay people wages out of all proportion to the productivity of their work, with the irrational and inflationary results entailed.

He would own a piece of the country in the same sense that the Rockefellers, the Kennedys and the Harrimans now hog great chunks of America. He'd no longer be a no-account, a propertyless job serf; he'd have equity; he'd be a capitalist, too.

Nomads at Home

Such a program would be important for everybody, since most of us are broke and in debt, nomads in our own country.

Kelso isn't going to solve all our problems. His proposals don't seem to have much to offer to help us resolve the contradiction between undisciplined, wild consumerism and universal, ecological death; undoubtedly, too, carrying them out will create new problems, but we desperately need new problems.

What makes his ideas appealing is that they'll liberate us from our old problems, which are now exhausted as sources of creativity. Kelso's proposals do promise to free us from our morbid dependency on economic health through armament manufacture; they promise a way out of the welfare mess, out of food-stamp plans and ship subsidies, out of perpetual inflation, and they suggest a means of doing these things that isn't too disruptive.

If Kelso would end our indefensively unjust distribution of wealth whereby five per cent of the population own the rest of us, he would do it without confiscation, without taking from the rich, or even diluting the value of what they own, without burdening us with a new, socialist, administrative apparatus.

But if not Kelso, then something else, because a free people must own the nation they live in.

Something Beyond the Computer

By ART STOTT

During the 'thirties, which some called dirty and others recall as a Golden Age of Sport, Bob Edgren was the ranking authority among this continent's sports writers specializing on prize fights. Our paper carried a regular Saturday feature written and illustrated by him, and through it our readers were given a detailed insight into the abilities of the men who made a living from fistfighting at that time.

Stott

Having exhausted his material on actual fights, current and historical, Edgren conceived the idea of matching in fantasy the ring greats of different eras who had never met in actual combat. This was about 40 years before a promoter used the computer to reproduce a fictitious fight between the late Rocky Marciano and Cassius Clay.

Then and now the mock-up technique seems pretty hokey to me. It proves nothing — except, perhaps, that a smart operator can separate gullible customers from a substantial hunk of change to watch something that didn't happen.

★ ★ ★

I do not know how to program a computer. I do know, though, that last week, when I complained about my B.C. Hydro bill for the preceding two months and a few days, the Hydro people informed me that their programming had been in error and I was going to be credited with $1.13 for which I had been over-charged during the period. There were a lot more in the same boat — and I wondered, casually, if similar errors had occurred on previous bills which had gone unnoticed.

The computer, I was told, made no mistakes. The error arose from an inexact human factor — the guy who fed in the information boobed.

It follows, from my processes of logic, to wonder how you feed into a computer the human intangibles that are essential elements in winning an athletic contest. In a natural sequence, that brings me to one of my pet questions: How do you assess the competitive instinct in the individual?

In the last 45 years I've had a nodding acquaintance with hundreds of athletes and close friendship with some. Among the best, I've admired their high physical skill, their sportmanship and, not least of all, their competitive determination. Some of them have refused to be licked when, by standards other than their will to win, they should have been beaten. When you find an athlete with superlative skill, physical capacities of a high order and a spirit that will only countenance victory, you've got yourself a champ.

On television a couple of weeks ago I watched such a man — Alf Phillips Sr. — and he lost. Alf, for my money, was the greatest competitive diver produced in Canada. He won both tower and springboard championships at the first British Empire Games in Hamilton in 1930, and once he had won his first Canadian championship, he never lost one.

More recently he has taken up curling — a defence mechanism, perhaps, from a receding hairline. Currently he's Canada's senior champion in that sport. But the other weekend he met another competitor and came off second best. The other competitor's name was Alf Phillips Jr. Which may go to prove something about heredity. Alf Sr. didn't like losing. Alf Jr. didn't like beating his father. But he wouldn't have been the son of his father if he hadn't given the contest everything he had. That's what being a competitor is about.

Al Patnik, the best of them all when Ohio State was producing the finest springboard divers in the war-torn world, and the greatest I have known, had the same highly developed instinct.

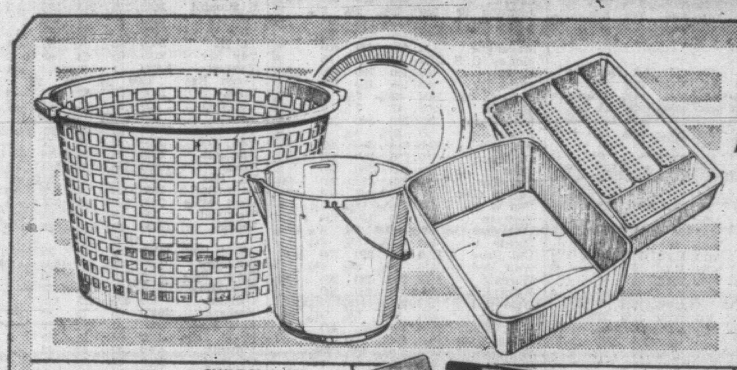

In one contest he was running neck and neck with a challenger up to their last dive. The challenger preceded him through the final round, hit an almost perfect dive and scored a nine. That seemed to put the contest away, but it didn't phase Patnik. He congratulated his opponent, told him he'd executed a beautiful dive, but, he added, a ten was necessary from either of them to win. Then he went up and and scored the virtually impossible ten. That, also, is what being a competitor is about.

★ ★ ★

Last year I watched a seven-year-old redhead learn to play tike lacrosse. He drew a lot of penalities, less because he's red-headed than because he hadn't learned to avoid infractions when he was putting everything he had into the game. He and his team mates didn't win them all, but they won enough to get into their provincial final and played themselves to exhaustion losing to a better outfit. They didn't like losing, but their mentors had taught them enough of the veneer of sportsmanship to hide their disappointments as they congratulated the winners. I came away satisfied. The redhead was a competitor. How do you feed that into a computer to see how he's going to make out in seasons ahead?

Algoma Steel

Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. had net earnings of $9.17 million or 79 cents a share during 1969, nearly 54 per cent below 1968's earnings of $19.75 million or $1.70 a share.

Sales dropped 15 per cent from 1968, to $183.06 million from $216.21 million. Expenses were down about eight per cent, to $166.18 million from $180.13 million.

Iron and steel shipments for the year were down to 1.51 million tons from 1.79 million tons.

The company is still coping with a strike of railway employees in the steelworks, and the railway is being run by staff and supervisors, Algoma said.

Bailey Hotels

Bailey Hotels Ltd., a new western Canadian hotel management service, has been founded by former fast food supplier Nat Bailey, of Vancouver.

The firm is offering experienced hotel management personnel, consulting services, feasibility studies, equipment recommendations and a training program for hotel employees.

Bailey, owner and president of Villa Motor Inn, and former president of White Spot Ltd., the restaurant chain he founded, said the new company's vice-president is Robert Wall and general manager is Doug Clark. Directors are Robert J. Stout and Roy J. Parkinson.

Bow Valley

Bow Valley Industries Ltd. had a net income of $1.52 million or 37 cents a share for the six months ended Nov. 30, compared with $1.1 million (35 cents a share) during the previous year.

The 1968 income included an extraordinary $360,070 from the sale of investments.

Dynamic

The company has recently purchased 90 per cent interest in four claim blocks and three fractional claims in the Ruttan Lake area of Manitoba, approximately four miles east of the Sherritt Gordon copper-zinc discoveries.

U.S. Eases Tight Money To Aid Housing Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move to put more money into circulation for the hard-hit housing industry, two federal agencies have cleared the way for substantial increases in the maximum interest rates U.S. commercial banks can pay on savings deposits.

In addition to helping the housing industry by providing more money for mortgages from savings, Tuesday's action by the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was designed to bring commercial and mutual savings banks into keener competition for the investor's dollar. Savings banks pay up to five per cent.

The move was interpreted by many as an easing of the tight credit policy maintained in the government campaign to curb inflation.

The announcement was made after a week of almost daily meetings between the Fed, the FDIC and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which is expected to authorize higher rates for savings and loan associations as well.

The Fed and FDIC boosted the maximum rates on bank savings deposits to 4½ per cent from four, the first change since Nov. 24, 1964.

PAY UP TO 5¾

On single maturity time deposits of less than 100,000, the two agencies authorized banks to pay 5½ per cent interest on one-year securities and 5¾ per cent on two-year securities. A five-per-cent rate had previously been in effect.

A new ceiling of 7½ per cent was set on time deposits of $100,000 or more. The rate for such deposits left for six months to one year was increased to seven per cent, while those left a year or more will be eligible for the highest rate.

The interest rate for savings and loan associations now is 4¾ per cent on regular passbook accounts and 5¼ per cent on certificates of deposit for a special length of time.

The first reaction in the banking field was cautious.

"The action . . . is constructive to the extent that it produces further incentive for savings on the part of small savings depositors and thus helps in the battle against inflation," A. W. Clausen, president of the Bank of America, said in San Francisco. But Clausen said the commercial banking system is still being denied access to major money markets.

Ward C. Krebs, Wells Fargo Bank's credit policy committee chairman, said he did not believe the increases would attract additional funds into the banking system.

B.C. Bank Shows Gain in Profits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sharp gains in profits and assets were reported Tuesday to the Bank of British Columbia's annual meeting.

Bank president Albert E. Hall reported that unaudited profits for the first two months of the current fiscal year were close to four times the undivided profits for all of last year.

In the same two months, November and December, assets rose more than $4,000,000, to $78,200,000, Hall said.

For the year ended Oct. 31, 1969, the bank had a balance of revenue of $121,563 and undivided profits of $30,953.

Hall said shareholders could expect to start receiving dividends not later than 1972 if "anywhere near normal" economic conditions prevailed.

Stock Prices Of Pill Firms Drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices of leading oral contraceptive manufacturers have dropped sharply and have been flirting with new lows after recent adverse publicity.

G. D. Searle and Co., a Chicago firm accounting for an estimated 31 per cent of the American oral contraceptive market, closed Tuesday at $37.62. It has had a 1969-1970 trading range of $50.50 to $35.37. Searle's products are called Enovid, Enovid-E and Ovulen.

Syntex Corp., a Panamanian-based concern with about 10 per cent of the U.S. domestic market, hit a new 1969-1970 closing low Tuesday of $45.25. Its 1969-1970 high was $86.75. The firm's product is marketed under the name of Norinyl.

"There is no question that the publicity has had an adverse effect on the price performance of the leading companies in the birth control field," said Mary Wrenn, an analyst of drug issues at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith.

Searle and Syntex are considered leaders in the birth-control pill field.

Other firms in the business are so broadly based with so many other products that the pill represents only a minor percentage of their total sales volume and would not necessarily affect their stock performance.

New Meat Plant Set for Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Dennis Bradley, 32, vice-president of F. G. Bradley Co. Ltd., says his company is to open a $1,500,000 meat processing plant in Edmonton.

He said the firm, which supplies specialty meats to hotels and restaurants, will move its processing plant from Toronto to Edmonton because of lower costs.

Mr. Hobbs graduated from Brandon College with a Bachelor of Science degree in Geology and brings to Quasar a total of 14 years Exploitation and Development experience in Western Canada. His wealth of exploitation experience has been gained during employment with Sun, Murphy, Jefferson Lake oil companies headquartered in Calgary and Regina. Mr. Hobbs will be concentrating his efforts in the more developed areas of Saskatchewan and Southern Alberta.

Quasar Petroleum Ltd. is embarking on a major exploration and development program in Saskatchewan, Alberta, NE B.C., N.W.T., and the Arctic Islands. Quasar Petroleum Ltd. is a wholly owned subsidiary of American Quasar Petroleum Co., listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

City Bank Debits Establish Record

Substantially more bank debits during December helped propel Greater Victoria banks to a new 12-month record of $7.425 billion last year — $1.1 billion ahead of 1968.

The figure means private account holders drew or wrote cheques valued at $7.425 billion between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31. It does not include amounts debited in the public sector, such as cheques drawn on the Bank of Canada, the government of Canada or the chartered banks on themselves.

Individual accounts include savings, current and personal chequing accounts.

Canadian Bankers' Association reports the figures monthly, and today said the Greater Victoria clearing house showed debits of $695.5 million for December, up $36.1 million from December 1968.

The total for November 1969 was $655.6 million, CBA said.

Sydney Steel Awarded PGE Rails Order

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Officials of Pacific Great Eastern Railway in British Columbia have announced that Sydney Steel Corp. has won a $5,000,000 order for steel rails and tie plates, it was learned here.

Railway officials said that Sydney Steel, a Nova Scotia Crown corporation, won the order in tight bidding with other major producers.

The railway, which stretches from North Vancouver to the Peace River district, is a B.C. Crown utility.

The new order will be filled by July, railway officials said, and consists of 26,600 tons of rail and about 6,000 tons of tie plate.

Apple Crop Scores Gain

VERNON (CP) — Killing frosts last winter in B.C.'s interior fruit-growing areas affected most crops but the apple crop increased by more than 1,000,000 bushels, delegates to the annual B.C. Fruit Growers' Association heard Tuesday.

BCFGA president G. H. Whittaker said harvests of plums, cherries, apricots, peaches and pears ranged from zero to very little.

The 1969 apple crop was 6,098,279 bushels, up from the 5,168,449 bushels picked in 1968.

Whittaker said the 1968 crop realized $33,365,126 for all fruit varieties. No figures for 1969 were available.

Despite high sales, the industry must improve growing efficiency, processing, handling and sales in every division, he said.

A disorder known as apple core has shown up in Red Delicious apples in the past two weeks in the Vernon, Kelowna and Winfield areas. Researchers think that last winter's cold, high spring temperatures and a wet harvesting season may have been the cause, he said.

Mentally Ill, Retarded May Lack Chemicals

By KEN KELLY

MONTREAL (CP)—Newly-found abnormalities of body chemistry may be at the root of the mental retardation that is linked to phenylketonuria, known as PKU, and of schizophrenia.

Two important research studies by a University of British Columbia team raise these possibilities. They were reported Tuesday to the annual meeting of the Canadian Society for Clinical investigation by Dr. Thomas L. Perry, professor of pharmacology.

PKU is a bodily failure from birth to make proper use of the chemical phenylalanine. Many, but not all, sufferers from it are more or less severely mentally retarded. About one in every 50 persons is a carrier who passes it to future generations.

Schizophrenia—or split personality—is the commonest mental illness. Thousands are confined to mental hospitals with that as the diagnosis. One out of slightly more than every hundred persons develops it at some stage in life.

Odor played a curious part in both diseases. The peculiar odor of mentally-retarded PKU sufferers led to discovery of the disease years ago. And it was a curious odor associated by some sensitive medical personnel with schizophreniacs that got the UBC groups into its study.

FOUND BODY LACKING

Their PKU work led to the discovery of deficiencies in the body levels of glutamine, a common acid constituent of blood, body tissue and protein foods, among retarded PKU sufferers.

Because untreated sufferers from PKU are rare—testing programs to identify sufferers and corrective diets in the first seven years of life have eliminated most untreated cases—the UBC group was lucky to find two adult brothers, both untreated PKU sufferers. One was severely retarded. The other, of superior intelligence, worked as a junior bank executive.

The retarded brother had glutamine deficiency but not his brighter brother. The researchers also found a normally-intelligent woman, an untreated PKU sufferer, whose glutamine level was normal.

In 12 other PKU sufferers in a mental institution who had low glutamine levels, all were retarded.

Another six PKU children were examined and it was found that their diet was correcting their glutamine deficiency.

The results led the UBC group to speculate that chronic deficiency of glutamine in the years of greatest brain development—generally the first seven years of life—was responsible for the mental retardation associated with PKU.

DIET BEST METHOD

It was found that large doses of glutamine instead of the PKU corrective diet failed to raise glutamine level to normal. The diet involves carefully controlled intake of all foods and administration of milk casein from which phenylalanine has been removed. It is expensive and unpallatable.

Dr. Perry told a news conference that the UBC work shows that a number of normally-intelligent adults may have unsuspected phenylketonuria which they could pass along to their children, especially if they married another unsuspecting sufferer. They can be identified by a simple blood test and given counselling.

CATCHING IT ON ALL SIDES, federal labor minister Bryce Mackasey Tuesday had a full day: two winter springs off Oak Bay and then from land, a blast from tugboat operators who denied they were scorning safety standards. The minister landed an 11- and 6-pounder. Mackasey Monday night claimed some B.C. tug operators ignored safety practices and that some boats were vastly overpowered for their size. He said the federal government will likely bring in legislation this year to force safety afloat. (Photo by Robin Clarke)

AGAINST MANSON 'FAMILY'

$5M Suit Enters Murder Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $5,000,000 wrongful death suit has been filed against Charles M. Manson and four members of his hippie-type "family" in connection with the death of hair stylist Jay Sebring, slain with actress Sharon Tate and three others at her mansion last August.

In addition to Manson, 35, the action by Sebring's parents and business associates filed in Super Court Tuesday names as defendants Susan Denise Atkins, 21; Charles D. Watson, 24; Patricia Krenwinkel, 22, and Linda Kasabian, 20.

Sebring, 35, died of multiple stab wounds. A rope was found tied about his throat, looped over a ceiling beam and tied about the actress' neck.

In addition to Sebring and Miss Tate, three other visitors to her home were slain the night of Aug. 9. All of the defendants cited in the wrongful death suit also are charged in the knife deaths the following night of Leno LaBianca, a market owner, and his wife.

WOULD IMPOUND PROFITS

The suit filed by Sebring's family and associates seeks to impound any profits the defendants receive from The Family Jams, Inc., a corporation newly formed to turn out records of Manson's musical compositions. Manson has said the money would be used to defend the murder charges.

Plaintiffs, in addition to Sebring's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Kummer of Detroit, Mich., include Sebring's estate and his hair grooming products firm.

Specifically asked in the complaint was recovery of $5,000 for the hair stylist's funeral.

"Our clients," said lawyers for the plaintiffs, "will ask the court to declare a trust and impound all defendants' proceeds from commercial exploitation related to acts for which they are under indictment.

"It is diabolic that persons under indictment could be permitted to profiteer from their own alleged evil acts."

PICTURE YOURSELF ... DRUNK

Well, in future, you won't have to picture yourself driving under the influence—Alaska state troopers will do it for you.

The troopers' Anchorage office has taken delivery of $2,500 worth of closed-circuit television equipment with which they intend to film all drivers suspected of driving while under the influence of alcohol.

Indonesia Edges Back From Brink of Disaster

By STANLEY KARNOW

DJAKARTA (WP) — There is probably no better place than Indonesia to observe a fundamental change that, in different ways and to varying degrees, has overtaken nearly all the countries of Asia.

For here, as elsewhere in the Far East, the ideological stereotypes that once promised to fulfill dreams of grandeur have lost their allure, and new leaders are aware that slow, pragmatic methods offer the only hope for development.

This change is most apparent in the contrasting styles of former president Sukarno, who was ousted in 1967 following an abortive Communist coup d'etat, and the present government headed by General Suharto.

In his two decades as the "mouthpiece of the Indonesian people," as he called himself, Sukarno ruled by oratory, spouting catchy phrases and mystical acronyms.

●

But while his magic rhetoric served to unify this sprawling archipelago into a nation, Sukarno gradually outlived his usefulness as his speeches ceased to be relevant to the increasing pressures from a younger generation demanding progress.

Thus Sukarno, like Mao Tse-tung and other charismatic contemporaries, failed to appreciate that a new revolution of rising expectations had replaced the old dynamic of political revolution.

And it is likely that this revolution of expectations would have toppled him even if he had not been swept away in the bloody aftermath of the Communist attempt to seize power. In any event, he has been succeeded by men who are his very antithesis.

Gen. Suharto, the current president, is less a supreme chief of state than primus inter pares in a college of faceless army officers.

In the wake of Sukarno's incredible mismanagement, which turned this potentially rich land into a shambles, Suharto and his government face enormous economic, social and political challenges.

Food production is lagging behind a rapidly expanding population that has made the island of Java, with more than 70 million people, one of the most crowded regions in the world.

Paid miserable wages, the army and civilian administration are corrupt, and their squeeze on local peasants and merchants both discourages productivity and weakens the government's credibility.

The country is also saddled with a foreign debt of more than $2.5 billion, about one-third of it owed to the Soviet Union for military equipment purchased by Sukarno when he threatened to conquer Dutch West New Guinea and subvert Malaysia.

The massacre of roughly a half-million Communists and suspected fellow travellers after the 1965 coup has left social wounds that will take years to heal.

Moreover, an additional half-million relatives of some 120,000 suspected Communists still languishing in jails are virtual refugees whose bitterness and animosity towards the government could degenerate into violence in the future.

●

Unlike Sukarno, who refused to admit that anything was wrong, Suharto does not conceal Indonesia's problems. More important, his government is making rational efforts to resolve them.

Within the past two years, for example, the wild spiral of inflation has been brought under control by balancing the budget and such other measures as offering high interest rates on bank deposits in order to encourage savings.

Using the army as a labor force, the government has also improved roads, railways and other communications, and it is now starting a national economic plan scheduled to raise agricultural and industrial output by 50 per cent in the next five years.

A nine-nation consortium including the United States is currently giving Indonesia $600 million in economic aid this year and, at the same time, foreign investors have pledged millions more for oil, mining and timber concessions.

●

These and other steps prompt Suharto's economic brain trust—composed mostly of American-educated experts—to forecast cautiously that Indonesia will be stabilized by next year.

And as the country's economic growth gathers momentum after that, these specialists predict, many of its political and social troubles can be settled more easily.

On a visit to Indonesia 10 years ago, Soviet Premier Khrushchev listened patiently one day as Sukarno described a series of harebrained economic schemes. Then Khrushchev commented: "Mr. President, before a gentleman can wear a necktie he must learn how to button his pants."

At the moment, then, the Indonesians are not yet ready to wear neckties but, to their credit, they are striving to fasten their trousers.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

West Seeking Western History for Schools

VANCOUVER (CP) — Educationists from the four Western provinces are trying to get more local flavor into history, civics and social studies courses in the public school system.

Representatives from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba have formed a special committee to study possible curriculum revisions aimed at improving courses and texts.

John Church, B.C. representative and director of professional development for the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said the committee believes Canadian schools rely too heavily on textbooks from other nations.

And another problem is that Canadian-produced texts are usually put together in Eastern Canada and tend to be top-heavy with material from that area, said Mr. Church.

"What we need is material with a B.C. flavor for B.C. schools," said Mr. Church. "One of the problems we face in school today is that very little material in history and social studies actually relates to the world in which students live.

"There is nothing dealing with problems that exist in B.C. for students here to study. We have reached a stage where our students are tuned into the problems but the teachers aren't—because they are forced to use material in the classroom that is not relevant."

Mr. Church said he expects the joint project to last four or five years. The idea is to get teachers and others in related fields involved in developing new approaches.

Ideally, the result would be "courses of study that deal with the problems of today, as they exist locally."

A MAN-SIZED PRIZE

BARRY, Wales (UPI) — The Empire Bingo and Social Club is offering a gentleman as a prize for the woman who wins their grand bingo prize.

Tyrone Francis, a 20-year-old six footer who is the prize, said for 24 hours he will do everything the winner says — "anything short of murder."

DENIES MAKING PROMISE

Bothered Bennett Jumps on Hot Line

By LLOYD BARRETT

Stung by repeated references to an election promise he says he never made, Premier Bennett Tuesday night took direct action to set the record straight.

He called Victoria radio station CKDA's open line program, ticked off the moderator and chided those anonymous callers who referred to the premier's "promise" not to raise B.C. Hydro rates.

"I never made any such promise," said Bennett who stayed on the line for about 10 minutes.

•

The premier declared that what he had promised was that old-age pensioners will be helped.

"And that's exactly what we are going to do," he said.

Bennett said the reason for the proposed rate boost was elementary economics — higher wages and higher costs of borrowing money — and he added there was just no alternative except to increase rates.

Bennett said the current inflationary situation is clearly the fault of the federal government which, he pointed out, had control of the nation's finances. All a province could do — and B.C. was doing it — was to balance its budget.

BENNETT
...chides callers

The premier's call followed a procession of complaints from the public about the size of Hydro bills, especially from persons heating their homes by means of electricity. Several said their monthly bills were in the $40 and even $50 dollar range and for modest-sized homes.

From the tone of the premier's comments it was clear that he was irritated by the complaints and especially by what he told moderator Joe Craig were untruths. He said such mis-statements had a habit of being given credence through repetition.

Bennett volunteered the information that he was a "student" of public opinion and that he used the media to keep his finger on the public pulse. He said he was a thorough reader of newspapers and he invited any listeners who still doubted he had made a no-increase promise to check back copies of the newspapers.

Craig thanked Bennett for calling to straighten out the record and asked the premier if he would be willing to take part in a future program.

Bennett countered by suggesting the moderator and his listeners make tracks for the public gallery of the legislature especially when the new budget is tabled early in February.

Notorious Killjoy Caught in Act

Cartoonist Bob Bierman will be in for a surprise if he tries to corral more than one panel of the fence surrounding the Victoria aquatic facility site. Mayor Courtney Haddock hasn't worked out the details of his fence-painting contest, scheduled to run from May to September, but the betting is that he'll insist on one panel per person at the Quadra Street site. Haddock says he intends to ask the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association to organize the painting contest along similar lines to the provincial archives contest of some years ago. He says he decided on a May start because "the weather is hardly right for outdoor painting until then." In the meantime, would-be fence painters can at least do a Bierman and book their spot. That's singular, not plural.

Politicians to Hear Themselves Talk

Debate from the floor will be louder than ever this year, thanks to a $30,000 sound system installed in time for Thursday's opening of the 29th British Columbia legislature.

There's new lighting too — making the chamber as bright as day for night sittings. And for each member, a new microphone that flexes to any direction or can be taken from the desk stand to be hand held or worn from the neck on a cord.

PRESERVE QUALITY

Along with rewiring, replacement of paint-clogged accoustic tiles and inconspicous soundproofing of walls and modesty panels, have been implemented under the supervision of George Giles, director of design for the department of public works.

"The problem is to make practical improvements without destroying the essential quality of the interior," he said in an interview. "We're always conscious of the fact this is an historic building — a part of the history of British Columbia."

Although fluorescent lighting and linoleum tile floors have been installed in many areas of the main Legislative Buildings the legislative chamber with its pink Italian marble walls and carved oak woodwork has retained its symmetry since the building was opened in 1898.

"The housing for the new speakers is patterned in shape and color after the hexagonal wrought iron and glass lamps suspended from the ceiling," said Giles. "It will also be suspended but will be taken down in between sessions."

VAPOR LIGHTS

To improve lighting, vapor lights have been beamed on to the four decorative skylight domes in the chamber ceiling from outside and decorative glass side panels have been illuminated.

"Little or no light was visible before," Giles said. "Now it gives the effect of being day-lit all the time. "Consequently, the light for reading at desk level has been improved."

Giles said the public address system was replaced as a result of complaints over the years.

NEVER SURE

"We were never sure whether the complaints were about what was being said or what wasn't being heard."

Only once did sound technicians fail in the aim to preserve the appearance of the chamber.

Last week they hung beige-colored accoustic drapery over the marble walls. The drapes were ordered removed by Works Minister W. N. Chant.

"Why, it looked like a bedroom in there," he said. "The sound people think the curtains are a must, but I want that marble which is part of the traditional decor.

AAA-001 MYSTERY SOLVED

The mystery numbers are plates AAA-001 and AAA-002 and just who got them became a matter for conjecture after the man who lined up eight hours for first crack at the plates ended up with AAA-003.

But the picture becomes somewhat clearer today when a check of the Motor Vehicles Branch records shows AAA-001 was issued to John J. Smith of 444 Moss.

★ ★ ★

A call to Smith at the liquor board office today brought a diversion to the personnel office where the word was: "all we can say is he is a permanent employee of the board and employed in Victoria."

Could he come to the phone? "Oh no. No."

The MVB records show AAA-002 was issued to Andrew Lloyd Mack of 839 Hockley. The directory shows him as a member of the Canadian Armed Forces and a call to his home found him out.

When the government announced the new three-year plates, it promised they would be issued on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Bruce Roger of 971 Lovat spent from midnight to 8 a.m. at the door of the licence issuing office Jan. 5, only to discover it just wan't so.

First through the door when the office opened, he got AAA-003.

Motor vehicle branch officers could not be reached for comment this morning.

Hospital Union Seeks Full-Scale Inquiry

Public 'Unaware' Of Deterioration

By AB KENT

The business agent for B.C.'s largest independent hospital employees' union Tuesday called for a "public court of inquiry" into hospital financing.

Charles Burr, of Victoria, representing more than 800 members of Royal Jubilee Hospital Employees' Association, questioned the current system of hospital administration, public health and preventative medicine.

"We have a worried public and a worried staff today," said Burr.

"We must have a preventive program and give the people the care they need. But we have a government that is worried about cutting costs," Burr said.

NO CENTRAL AUTHORITY

The public, said Burr, is not aware of what is happening in the hospital field.

"There is no central authority the news media can go to to get the full story," he said.

An inquiry would help solve the problem, he said. It should have sittings in the north, in the central interior, in Vancouver, Nanaimo and Victoria, and have the power to call witnesses.

A Supreme Court justice should be named by the cabinet to select members of the "court," who should be guided by terms of reference set out by people in the health disciplines, Burr said.

The court would report recommendations to be acted on by the government.

Burr said cost of the court should be borne by provincial and municipal governments, labor and professional groups.

A pamphlet handed out by the association at the opening of the Eric Martin Institute on Tuesday asked whether politicians have taken over hospital administration, public health and preventive medicine; are they ignoring qualified professional advice? Is there a deterioration in labor relations and negotiations?

The sheet said proper health preventive measures and health care need more than buildings and equipment.

Staff must have strong, dedicated leadership and security without female discrimination and sub-standard income, the pamphlet said.

"We feel matters have deteriorated to such a state that people in this hospital don't seem to know where they're going any more," said Burr.

The hospital employees' association is anxious to see a basic wage established, he said.

The union thought it had accomplished this by winning an arbitration raising the ward housekeeper monthly salary from $306.25-$333 to $423-$453 last year.

This year the hospital eliminated the ward housekeeper category and returned the pay level to $306.25-$333, renaming the classification "ward maid," the same as what is covered in province-wide agreements with the Hospital Employees Union, Local 180.

"If management can lay down effective procedures for 1970 without negotiation, then there is no security," said Burr.

DUTIES VARY

"We are told it is the result of the provincial government's new financing. We are told we have to accept the (wage) equalization formula and standards of other hospitals in the province. Really, there are no standards because duties vary from hospital to hospital," Burr said.

There are about 76 women employees at Jubilee Hospital who fall into the ward maid category, of whom 72 per cent have dependents, the association agent said. For some, besides a $120 a month demotion, the hours of work have been changed and there is talk of layoffs, even though new staff is being hired for work in the Eric Martin Institute's 200,000 square feet of floors.

Some staff reductions were made in the two weeks before Christmas, which upset the whole staff, Burr said.

The new staff was being hired at the old rate of pay, he added.

MEET TO DEBATE ABORTION LAWS

The pros and cons of amending legislation on abortion will be debated Thursday, Jan. 29 at 8 p.m. in Victoria High School.

The public meeting has been arranged as part of a campaign organized by Mrs. Elizabeth Murrison, 854 Somenos, for easing abortion legislation.

The meeting will be a panel discussion moderated by Dr. J. S. Haywood of the University of Victoria's biology department.

Serving on the panel will be lawyer Rodney Beavan, Oak Bay MLA Dr. G. Scott Wallace, United Church minister Dr. E. Laura Butler and social worker Mrs. Bernice Packford.

22 Per Cent Pay Hike Offered Cement Union

An offer to raise wages 22 per cent at British Columbia's two cement factories is being voted on today by some 230 striking members of United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers Union.

Union president Bruno Schachel, of Cobble Hill, said results of the vote which could end a strike now in its sixth week, will be known at 9 p.m. Thursday.

But he said there would be no final settlement until verbal commitments made by Ocean Cement Ltd. and Lafarge Canada Ltd. regarding working conditions and training programs are put into writing.

'NOT THE ROOT'

Schachel said the union's eight-man bargaining committee was recommending the settlement, but the company offer is "not the root of the problem."

He referred to "tensions and dissatisfaction" among the membership that relate to working conditions, and which finally caused the first strike in the industry's 57 years in B.C.

It was Schachel's opinion that the companies will "work very hard to prevent this happening again.

"No committee could control the anger of the members if the company doesn't live up to its commitments. It's up to them (companies) to prove they really mean it."

He added: "We have shown a great amount of trust. I hope the company realizes we are sincere."

The cement workers' union had sought a 70-cent increase on a basic wage of $2.95 an hour, plus fringe benefits of 18 cents an hour, over two years. It also desired changes in holidays, welfare and other matters upon which some agreement has been reached.

The companies had offered 30 cents an hour at first. The new offer amounts to 65 cents an hour.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me if Majestic Prince will be racing this year? — G. C.

A. Majestic Prince originally was scheduled to run in two races at Santa Anita, the Charles Strub Stakes for four-year-olds, and the Santa Anita Handicap. However, a knot developed behind one of the Prince's knees and plans for the future were shelved by trainer Johnny Longden until the full extent of the problem can be ascertained. Meanwhile, Santa Anita Race Track is idled by a strike.

Q. What was the lowest recorded temperature in Victoria during the cold spell from Dec. 26, 1968 to March 1, 1969? C.E.B.

A. The lowest recorded temperature was 3.8 degrees above and was taken Dec. 29, 1968.

Camsell en route to Carolina Pass, Douglas at Ladysmith and Saanich Inlet, Quadra on Station Papa, Racer and Vancouver in port. Ready in Sandheads patrol area.

NAVY

Qu'Appelle and Mackenzie at sea, returning Jan. 22; Laymore at sea, returning Jan. 24; Endeavour in Vancouver, returning Feb. 20; all other ships in port.

DISTRICT POWERLESS

Residents in the Henderson-Cedar Hill area were without electricity for more than two hours Tueday night due to a power failure.

The failure occurred at 10:50. Power was restored at 1:02 a.m.

B.C. Hydro officials said a tree limb cut the line.

When repairs were completed, the power was shut off for about 10 minutes over a much larger area. This was necessary to restore the current. It accounts for clocks being 10 minutes behind time in other districts, such as Cadboro Bay.

Arthur Mayse...

THE P & O LINER ORONsay is a splendid ship, a city with lights by night, and a queenly spectacle by day in our narrow inland waters. Her owners' choice of Vancouver as her British Columbia port of call didn't go down well with Victorians when the choice was made in 1954. But for the time being at least, the mainland city is most heartily welcome to the lady.

We can be sure that a bout of typhoid remains an unpleasant, racking experience for those unlucky enough to contract it. But, thanks to medical progress, it's something less than the unholy terror it was when "Typhoid Mary" was cutting her swath in New York City many years ago.

Much publicized Mary, herself immune, was a cook who came to realize that typhoid flowered where she had passed. A simple person, badly frightened, she would neither turn herself in nor change her trade.

★

She flitted in and out of homes and institutions under any number of assumed names, and the medical health sleuths didn't catch up with her for 31 years.

Typhoid Mary died in detention with gall bladder intact, a woman whose misfortune modern surgery could have lifted.

A carrier, and an unwitting one, deserves classification as an Act of God.

Still, we can assume that the Almighty expects man to take thought for such troubles as he may. The Oronsay episode emphasizes the advisability of anti-typhoid shots, or boosters where indicated, for ships' crews as well as for passengers bound to or from Canadian ports.

To that, and to the need for an adequately financed and staffed medical health service here at home, The Victoria Medical Society warning of what could happen here is uncomfortably plain.

Mrs. Mavis Edwards of 445 Sparton Road insists that a parcel which she asserts was sent from North Ireland last Nov. 5 contains nothing that would attract a sniff from a police dog.

★

Yet, says she, that parcel reached her only this morning.

And that, Mrs. Edwards claims, is not all.

She maintains that somebody, somewhere, is nipping the stamps off letters that reach her from friends in foreign lands.

"It isn't our mailman," she says. "We've had the same man for 11 years. He's a nice fellow, and honest as the day is long.

"I don't even suggest that those stamps are disappearing in Victoria. But someone is taking them, and we're not at all happy about it.

★

"I'd like to know, too, why a letter I sent to an old friend in Terrace to thank her for her Christmas gift should come back with an Ottawa imprint on it, and "person unknown" on the front. She's had the same address for 30 years, and she's coming down soon to visit me."

We can only wish her luck in these vexations, and trust that all will be explained to her satisfaction.

But that will take considerable doing!

Traffic control in Victoria has improved considerably in recent years, but some bad traps remain, and a reader points to one of them. He wonders when the dangerous pedestrian approach to the Town and Country shopping centre will receive the attention it needs.

"There have been two deaths so far," he writes, "and as a driver who is also a pedestrian on occasion, I am convinced that it's merely a matter of time before some other person is killed at this crossing. I have once again returned home shaken from seeing two children missed by inches by a speeding truck."

I've been shaken there a time or two myself, and so perhaps have you.

Crosswalks are all very well, but that one needs the authority of a traffic light to back it, and for the sake of life and limb, the sooner it can be installed, the better.

That's it, and off now, for a police-dog-type sniff at our mild January air. It can't be spring, but how else can one describe it?

TOURISM SUFFERING

Cowichan Valley Hit For Parochialism

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Valley has almost ideal facilities available for tourism but parochialism stands in its way, an official of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce told the local chamber Tuesday.

John Tibbits of Montreal, manager of the Canadian chamber's organizational service department, said a united effort was needed by merchants and citizens to attract more tourists.

"You should go after the National Tourist Association and the government and try to bring together the different tourist service industry people."

As an example of lack of tourist awareness, Tibbits said he had asked directions from an RCMP constable when he arrived in Duncan. "He gave directions but he could have been more helpful," he said.

Police, waitresses, young people, the general public and merchants should realize the potential of a happy tourist. "The tourist is a misunderstood animal."

The Montrealer, who has a summer home near the Malahat and who conducted a development clinic survey on Duncan in 1968, suggested the city might benefit from examples of civic restoration in eastern Canada.

"The Norwich Plan for downtown restoration at Niagara Falls has given the village a Tudor look at the cost to each merchant of about $2.50 a front foot. All overhanging signs and wiring have been removed, leaving only clean, uncluttered lines."

'PEPSI COLA FACADE'

The new look had led to civic pride and increased tourist and local business.

Tibbits said merchants and civic officials in Duncan had intimated they would like to see several undesirable buildings removed and improvements made to "do away with the Pepsi Cola facade."

But not everyone favors change as exemplified in a film by the National Film Board made at Napawnee, near Kingston, Ont. Old-timers resented anything new and different even though it mean no jobs and caused young persons to flee the area to find careers and futures elsewhere."

Soon the town will die, the film indicated.

SUCCESSFUL TECHNIQUE

David Gibson, field representative for the British Columbia Chambers of Commerce, said a technique of preparing the appropriate official in advance had proved successful in dealing with various departments of government.

He said the meetings were more effective whether it be on highways, pollution or industrial development.

He said the B.C. chamber was sponsoring a business education series that had been endorsed by the B.C. School Trustee's Association and the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Two were held in Dawson Creek last year and five were planned for 1970. Two already had been held, at Nanaimo and Chilliwack, and the others will be Castlegar, Kamloops and Terrace.

"These forums have helped dispel the false idea that all businessmen are bad guys and all educators live in ivory towers," Gibson said.

The chamber is also anxious to promote business economics as a separate course or as part of current courses in high schools so that a graduate left knowing something about inflation and other real problems.

Hot Meals Wheel Into Cold Facts

The meals on wheels service needs a subsidy to keep going, Saanich Ald. William Noel said Tuesday.

About $4,800 is required, said Ald. Noel, who is chairman on the community council for the program.

Bulk of the needed money, $4,000, is for salary for a coordinator of the service, pioneered in Saanich four years ago and now operating in Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt as well.

Since last spring, the program has been co-ordinated by Silver Threads.

COST ADDED

Ald. Noel said the detailed work has meant that Silver Threads had to hire someone and pay the cost from its budget.

"I have written to Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis clubs for financial support," he said.

"And if they don't subsidize us we'll be in real trouble. We'll just have to go to the intermunicipal committee and ask for money on a grant basis."

This committee would then have to ask for the money from the four Greater Victoria municipalities.

Legion Names Head

John R. Bruce was elected vice-president and Robert T. Wingen secretary-treasurer; Allan Shaw, bar manager; Rev. J. W. Leighton, acting chairman of the sick and visiting committee.

IN PORT DEEP-SEA SHIPS

Victoria — Roald Jarl, Europe; Agios Nikolaos III, U.S. Atlantic.

Cowichan Bay — Borgestad, Japan.

Crofton — Amica, Europe; Munchen; Ciudad De Manizales.

Harmac — Star Taro, U.K.; Belmar, U.K.

Port Alberni — Thalassoporos, Japan; H. R. MacMillan, U.K.; Sunny Lady, South America; Migolina, Australia.

Chemainus — Oriental Clipper, Japan.

Nanaimo — Conan Forest, U.K.; Avenir, U.K.; Luigi D'Amico, Europe; Bertil Karlbom, U.K. and continental Europe.

OTTAWA BACKS CAPE MUDGE

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials of the federal and British Columbia governments have agreed to draft a proposed agreement under which Cape Mudge, an Indian reserve near Campbell River, can become a municipality.

A spokesman for Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said Tuesday that the decision was reached by Chretien, B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and band councillors at a meeting here.

A condition laid down by the Indians is that the reserve land be protected against non-Indian ownership. The draft agreement will be presented to Indians at the reserve on completion.

Duncan Introduces 'Comprehensive Plan'

DUNCAN — City council met in a special session Tuesday to give first reading to the 1970 zoning bylaw in order to consolidate two previous zoning bylaws and subsequent amendments.

Mayor Jim Quaife told newsmen the introduction of the new bylaw at this time had nothing to do with a legal dispute between the city and Kelly Douglas Co. Ltd.

The Burnaby firm owns a large former supermarket which has been vacant for many months and which is currently undergoing renovations. A car sales firm had applied and been refused a bylaw change to allow the building to be used as a showroom.

'ULTIMATE BENEFIT'

The court action resulted after the city alleged the company had contravened the zoning bylaw.

Quaife said the purposes of the bylaw are to repeal the 1958 and 1968 zoning bylaws and their amendments and "to give us a comprehensive plan" to guide the natural growth of the city in a systematic fashion for the "ultimate benefit of the community as a whole."

Horne Says Region Board Must Explain

The Capital Regional Board's inability to present a "reasonably explained budget" was criticized by Oak Bay council on Monday.

After Mayor Frances Elford had outlined the reasons given by the board for increases, Ald. Ian Horne said:

"The regional board is rather hypersensitive to questioning. I intend to question increases in budgets at all times. They are more palatable when services are increased.

"It is incumbent on public officials to come up with adequate explanations."

Anti-Spillage Measure Taken by Crofton Mill

CROFTON — A temporary apron is being installed at the loading dock to prevent spillage of wood chips into the water, a Crofton Pulp and Paper Company executive said today.

Mill manager Bill Reynolds said the company will also continue a practice of taking photographs of overloaded barges for submission to the Victoria mill managers who supply the chips.

The steps are being taken to help restrict the amount of wood chips that fall into the water during transit and from unloading at the dock. A clamshell scoop shovel unloads the huge barges and Reynolds said a permanent apron will be built.

He admitted spillage was taking place but not to the extent claimed by a Crofton fisherman who estimated between three and four units per barge ended up in the salt chuck.

SUFFOCATE FISH

Bob Duncan said the chips float to the bottom suffocating ground fish and using up important oxygen by slow decomposition.

Another fisherman, Bert Collinson, complained of fibrous material coating his nets, which he said was undigested pulp floating for miles past the effluent outfall.

Reynolds said the company is concerned about pollution and realized that rules and regulations were being tightened up.

"We have already taken steps to reduce discharge of solid and fibrous material. In many areas of pollution control, lack of technological expertise, not unwillingness to apply funds, has slowed significant advances."

Company officials will meet at a public forum with officials of SPEC—Society for Pollution and Environmental Control—Thursday at 8 p.m. in Khowhemun School in Duncan.

Psychology Course Slated for Duncan

A program of evening classes to be held in Duncan, titled Psychology Today, has been announced by Dr. C. M. Opgaard, president of Malaspina College.

It will consist of 10 weekly sessions from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday evenings, starting Jan. 27 at the Cowichan Senior Secondary School.

The instructor for the program, A. E. Cox, is a new member of the Malaspina faculty. The course will involve group discussions of psychological issues and problems relevant to the world of today.

The decision to institute the course arose from the popularity of psychology courses now being operated at the main campus in Nanaimo.

Adult education directors in Duncan and Lake Cowichan, Robert Thorburn and Mrs. Dorothy Clode, recommended that the new psychology program be offered as an off-campus course.

Topics such as the role of heredity and environment in human behavior, the applications of psychology, motivations, intelligence, attitudes and prejudice, will be dealt with during the ten-week program. The corse is open to anyone over 18 years and carries credits toward a college diploma.

Flyers to Hold Installation

'Include Indians, Eskimos in Development'

By JIM OSBORNE

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The results Canada achieves in northern development may in large measure determine its future status in the world.

There is wide agreement that the Canadian North will yield petroleum and mineral wealth on which North America can expect to depend in future.

However, many feel its social evolution either will make Canada a blueprint or cost her prestige in the eyes of developing countries.

Lloyd Barber, an appointed member of the Northwest Territories Council and vice-president of the University of Saskatchewan, says Canada must not miss the opportunity to prove to the world that several cultures can thrive in one region.

CAN'T CHANGE ARCTIC

N.W.T. Commissioner Stuart Hodgson believes that those who seek to develop the North's great wealth must include Indians and Eskimos at all levels of employment.

Robert Williamson, an elected N.W.T. councillor and director of an Arctic research centre at the Hudson Bay community of Rankin Inlet, also believes northern native people must be included in plans for developing the area.

They agree that since man cannot change the Arctic he must learn to live with it if he wants to develop it.

This ability is inherent in Eskimos and Indians who make up more than half the 50,000 population of the Yukon and N.W.T.

They are the logical source of a permanent labor force as opposed to the southern Canadians who earn high wages but leave after a couple of years of rigorous living.

Dr. Barber said in an interview the North cannot develop its potential, proven in the Alaskan oil discovery at Prudhoe Bay, without ensuring that Indians and Eskimos have a part in it.

Dr. Barber said it will take at least a decade to educate and prepare Eskimos and Indians to live in a highly developed North, although some already are in government and private jobs.

He believes there will be vast developments here as world demand for raw materials increases.

To supply potential demand, the Ottawa government and its private-company partners, Panarctic Oils Ltd., are spending $30,000,000 looking for oil. Two-thirds of the same rock formations beneath Prudhoe Bay lie in Canadian territory.

SIGNS PROMISING

There are promising signs of a copper find at Coppermine, on the Arctic coast 500 miles north of Yellowknife. Known wealth is on Baffin Island, home of vast iron ore deposits. Silver, uranium and semi-precious metal finds also have been reported.

Large deposits also support producing lead-zinc mines at Pine Point, N.W.T., and near Whitehorse, Yukon.

TALL ANSWERS PRINTED OUT

PETERBOROUGH, England (UPI) — Peter Hawes, who is 6 feet 6, is tired of answering stupid questions. So he had a card printed which says:

"I am six feet six inches tall, 252 pounds in weight and the possessor of size 14 shoes. No, I am not cold up here, nor am I the tallest man in the world. Yes, I do give the tailor a headache. No, I do not like low doors, overhanging shop awnings or single beds.

"Any further questions will be gladly answered."

Bill WALKER

It's too bad that Rocky Marciano wasn't around for his last fight. He won it.

He retained the heavyweight boxing championship of the world by knocking out Muhammad Ali, better known as Cassius Clay, in the 13th round, by computer, on Tuesday night.

This was an unprecedented battle for the mythical championship of all time between two past champions who were unbeaten in thier professional careers.

They fought according to data fed into a computer, the same computer which arrived at the final knockout. And the fight was shown in over 1,000 theatres and arenas across the United States and Canada.

It had come about because of an earlier computerized elimination fight series in which Clay had been beaten by Jim Jeffries. He threatened to sue producer Murray Woroner and only dropped the suit when this championship was proposed. Clay took a percentage, Marciano a cash settlement, but Marciano never knew how it would end.

He was killed in a plane crash three weeks after the filming was completed.

However, to his credit, at age 45 and 13 years after he retired, Marciano shed 50 pounds in six months to prepare for the film sequence. Clay dropped 30. In the fight scenes for which they sparred 70 rounds in Miami last year, both were in reasonable trim, Marciano slightly paunchy, and Clay with some fat showing around the middle, but with most of his old speed. Marciano wore a toupee to cover his bald spot, and it remained in place.

Before the fight there were the usual predictions of the experts, most of them wrong, also as usual, and the fighters' own evaluation of their chances.

Clay undefeated in 29 bouts didn't exactly predict victory, but he did sneer that to beat him, Marciano would have to catch him, and he doubted if that would happen.

That won't be easy," he commented.

Marciano, his exemplary and self-disciplined self, said he was glad to have the all-time championship decided this way — by computer, with the human element missing — and confided that he thought if he could corner Clay, he could knock him out, which he did.

And then the fight.

For the first few rounds it was all Clay, with his tremendous speed of foot, and hands, who held the upper hand.

Marciano with his shorter reach, 68 inches to Clay's 82, could seldom get close. And he was being soundly outboxed by Clay, almost a head taller at 6'3" to Marciano's 5'10" and 20 pounds heavier.

That was until round 10.

By that time Clay had a commanding lead of five points. Each round was computerized at the finish, giving the points awarded to each fighter, on a 10-point must basis, a condensed version of why the points were awarded, and the comparable maximum effectiveness of each man as the fight progressed.

It had been said earlier, and the computer obviously knew this, that Marciano's numbing blows might eventually take the steam out of Clay's attack.

It also had been said that Marciano was a bleeder and would be cut badly by Clay's superior boxing. All this had happened, and by round 10 Marciano was a bloody mess, with both eyes cut and his nose like a blob of blood-red kleenex.

He had been knocked down in the eighth and that had only happened twice in actual history.

Then it happened.

Marciano, whose most priceless asset during his career was his ability to hit, caught up with Clay and knocked him spinning to the canvas.

For this computerized blow, and his margin of superiority in the round, Marciano picked up two of the five points he was down earlier. He scored 10 points to Clay's eight.

There was brief dismay for Marciano fans in the 11th. Clay rallied spiritedly. But Marciano was equal to his foe, and the round was declared even.

Then in the 12th the computer gave itself away. The eventual secret was becoming clearer.

Clay was down again and the Brockton blockbuster was flailing away almost at will against his bigger rival.

It now was only a matter of time.

And that time came for Clay, suddenly, early in the 13th, he succumbed to a solid left hook. He was counted out at the 57-second mark. It was as if history was repeating itself. For Marciano had knocked out 43 of his foes in 49 winning bouts during his pro career. And Clay was to be the last.

●

Marciano now was the champion, and the crowd roared as only a crowd of 110 in the spacious Odeon Theatre could roar. Because their man had won.

During the actual filming each fighter was knocked down once. Marciano put Clay down with a right hand to the body, and Clay had decked Marciano, to one knee, with an overhand right.

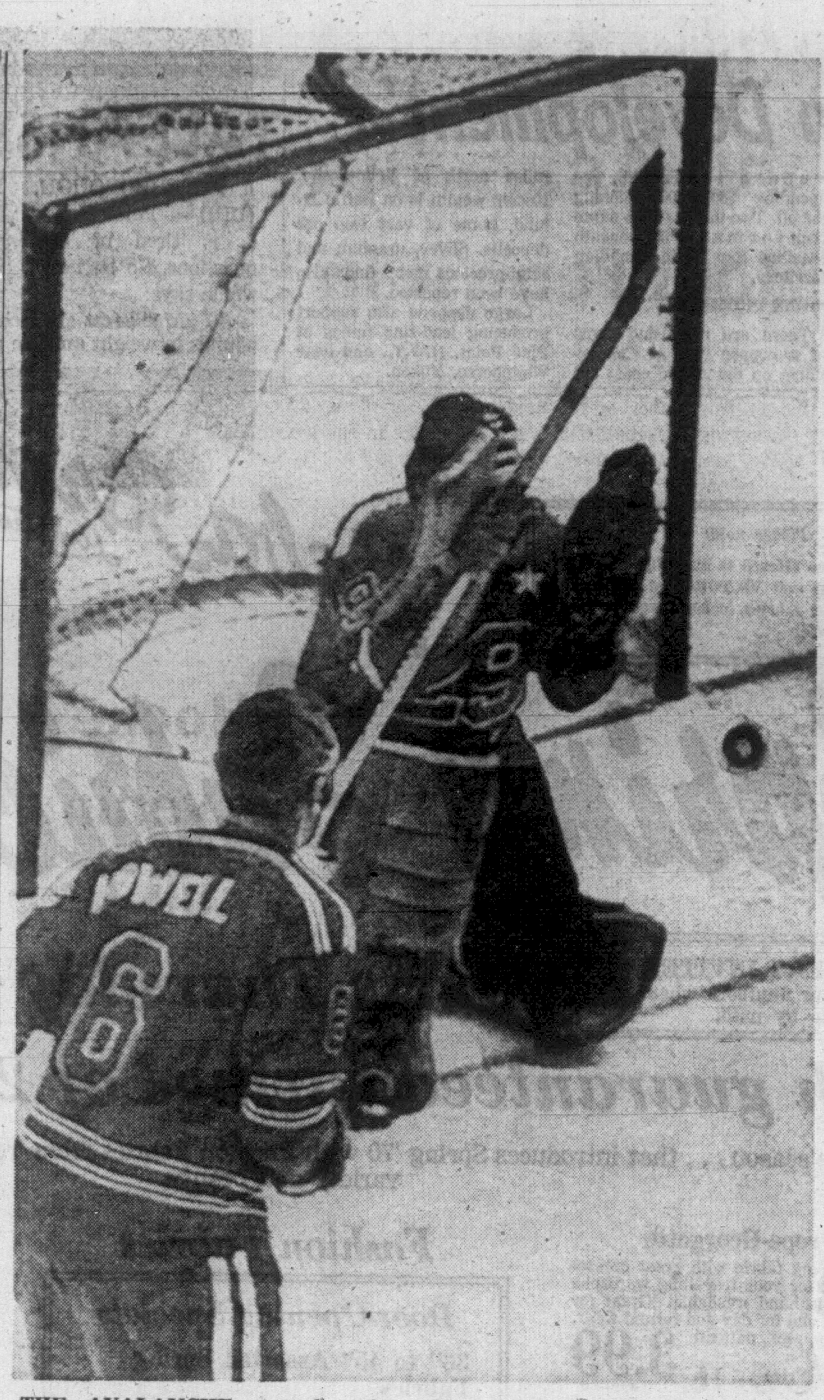

Actually, seven final versions had been arranged for the fight. But only one was on film. That was the decision the computer had made after evaluating all the information —the two champs at the peak of their career, the merits of their opponents, and the opinions of men against whom they fought.

Rocky would have loved it, and he would have shown compassion for Clay, as he did for all his beaten foes. And Clay for his part did show greatness for a time, in his last fight, with gloves on.

His continuing fight now is with the U.S. Army. He was stripped of his title in 1967 by the World Boxing Association when he refused to accept induction into the army. He is currently appealing a five-year sentence on that charge.

But he can't appeal the computer's decision.

That result is on film forever.

THE AVALANCHE started early for goalie Bernie Parent of the West in the National Hockey League All-Star game in St. Louis Tuesday night. In just 20 seconds, East defenceman Jacques Laperriere of Montreal fired a shot past Parent as defenceman Harry Howell of Oakland watches. East scored all four goals against Parent of Philadelphia in 4-1 victory before a record turnout of 16,587 fans. (AP Wirephoto)

No One Arguing East Has Power

Astute Orr Would Rather Own Than Coach Winners

ST. LOUIS (CP) — The East Division hammered the West Division 4-1 Tuesday in the annual National Hockey League all-star game and none of the players is arguing the outcome.

A record 16,587 fans attended. Last season's first East-West all-star game at Montreal, ended in a 3-3 tie. Up to then, the annual game involved an all-star team against the Stanley Cup champions.

Coach Claude Ruel of Montreal Canadiens, who guided the East Tuesday, said after the game he felt his division had shown it had the better team.

"They all played good hockey and they were the best on the ice," Ruel said. "They skated, checked and shot the puck like I told them and I think you could see they had the best team on the ice."

Scotty Bowman, manager and coach of St. Louis Blues, who bossed the West team, said that he couldn't complain about his squad's performance.

"They all played their best," he said. "You couldn't have asked them for any more.

"The East obviously had the bigger stars. There's no way of getting away from it. You couldn't put together a much better team than they had."

Orr Sharp on Ice and as Observer

Bobby Orr, 21-year-old Boston Bruins defenceman was playing in his second all-star game and contributed his usual outstanding performance, although he failed to score any points. Orr said he thought the whole team played an outstanding game.

Asked if he would some day like to coach such a power-packed squad, he had a better idea:

Orr took the greater share of defensive duties and Howe joked about his ice time in the dressing room later.

"You'll have to go out and practice tomorrow since you didn't get much work out there tonight," Howe said.

Hull, appearing in his ninth all-star game, was another outstanding player for the East, scoring his third all-star goal and assisting on Howe's 10th.

Ruel kept Hull on a line with centre Dave Keon and right winger Ron Ellis, both of Toronto Maple Leafs, and the trio provided the greater share of the East's 44 shots against western goalies Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers and Jacques Plante of the Blues.

He said he wasn't sure of how many more all-star contests he could look forward to.

"You never know, this might be my last," he said.

Plante, Prentice Best for West

Hull was not among the first 12 players selected to the all-star team by the eastern section of the NHL Writer's Association.

Hull missed the first 14 games of this season but Ruel picked him as one of seven players to fill out his team.

The outstanding stars for the West were Plante and Prentice.

"Prentice was easily our best man out there," Bowman said.

Plante won praise from Bowman for stopping six shots in the last half of the second period and 20 in the final period.

Many of his saves were on close in shots by Hull and Ellis.

But while Plante shut out the East in his half of the game, Chicago's Tony Esposito was doing the same against the West by stopping nine shots. The West managed only another eight shots on Ed Giacomin of New York in the first half of the game, while the East fired another 18 at Parent during the first 30 minutes.

Laperriere blasted a shot from just inside the blue line that beat Parent with only 20 seconds gone in the game. Parent said later he was screened by Howe on the shot.

Prentice replied for the West just 17 seconds later with an easy shot from about 40 feet in front of Giacomin. The Rangers goalie appeared to have an easy stop to make but the puck hit a bump in the ice and bounced over his stick into the net.

Howe Pots Winner on Power Play

The previous fastest two goals from the start of an all-star game came in 1963 when Frank Mahovlich of the Stanley Cup champion Maple Leafs scored at 2:22 of the first period. Montreal's Henri Richard of the all-stars scored the second goal of the game at 4:08.

Howe put the East back in front at 7:20 of the opening period when he took a quick pass from Hull and fired a hard shot from about 40 feet in front of Parent.

It was the 22nd all-star power play goal ever scored, the fifth for Howe and the second game-winning goal for the Detroit veteran, which matches Richard's record. Richard scored his second game-winning goal for the Canadiens in the 1966-67 game.

Hull made the score 3-1 at 3:26 of the second period when he took a pass from Detroit defenceman Carl Brewer and fired a hard shot from about 30 feet to the right of Parent.

It was Tkaczuk's first goal and his first all-star game appearance.

The goal at 9:37 of the second period brought a change in goalies for both sides.

Goyette Most Accurate

MONTREAL (CP) — Phil Goyette, St. Louis Blues veteran centre, is the National Hockey League's most accurate shooter.

Statistics for the first half of this season, released by the league Monday show Goyette scored 17 goals on 74 shots on goal for a league-leading 23 per cent in 36 games in the first half-season.

Only one other player surpassed the 20-per-cent mark in shooting accuracy. That was the rookie centre Jim Harrison, who started the season with Boston Bruins and was traded to Toronto Maple Leafs Dec. 10.

BRUINS SHOOT MOST

Two members of the Bruins shared the lead in total shots on goal in the first half of the schedule—Bobby Orr, leading scorer, and last season's scoring champion, centre Phil Esposito.

Both fired 204 shots at opposing netminders. Orr scored 12 goals for an accuracy percentage of 5.9, while Esposito counted 17 goals for 8.3 per cent.

BLUES TOPS

The most accurate team was St. Louis with 125 goals out of 1,204 shots on goal for 10.4 per cent. The Blues were the only team to reach 10 per cent or more in shooting accuracy, the first time a West Division club has led in this capacity. Lowest was Los Angeles, which scored 84 goals on 1,172 shots for 7.2 per cent.

Mikita, Vic Hadfield of New York and Berenson shared the lead in game-winning goals with five each.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Back in rolloff contention for third time is Millie Stafford, winner of women's fivepin award in 13th week of annual Bowler-of-the-Week competition sponsored by The Daily Times. Millie ended games of 263 and 219 with sizzling 362 effort for division-topping 844 series in Coffee Cuppers League at Town and Country Lanes.

Players Demand Seats At World Hockey Table

ST. LOUIS (CP)—National Hockey League players want an equal voice with club owners in any decisions regarding proposed international tournaments, the NHL Players Association said Tuesday.

Alan Eagleson of Toronto, association executive director, said this was one of several points discussed at a series of meetings between a players association delegation and an NHL governor's committee Monday and Tuesday.

Eagleson and Red Berenson, newly-elected president of the association, led that delegation while the governor's committee consisted of Bill Wirtz of Chicago Black Hawks, Charles Mulcahy of Boston Bruins and Bill Putnam of Philadelphia Flyers.

NHL President Clarence Campbell has suggested that the league may expand in the next three or four years to include an international playoff with the top European team.

The players association also said it strongly supports the move by Curt Flood who last Friday filed a suit in United States federal court seeking modifications of baseball's reserve clause which binds a player to his club.

Eagleson said the NHL players have instructed him to give any assistance possible to the baseball players association which supports Flood's stand.

The NHL players also pointed out ways by which hockey's reserve clause could be modified.

One suggestion was that the NHL owners honor a 1957 waiver agreement which said that any player dropped by an NHL club must be waived out of the league by all other teams. Under current practice, teams impose prohibitive waiver prices to keep other teams from picking up a player who could then be dropped from the roster and demoted to a minor league farm club.

Mandatory Use of Helmets Asked

He cited as an example Marcel Pronovost of Toronto Maple Leafs who had said he would have liked to play another season of major league hockey.

However, the Leafs imposed a $30,000 waiver price which other clubs were not willing to pay, and Pronovost was kept in the Leafs organization, where he took a coaching position with Tulsa in the Central Hockey League.

Eagleson said the governors expect a report to be submitted in March by a committee of general managers on the subject of waivers.

The players association asked that the mandatory wearing of helmets be given serious consideration by team owners.

"The players feel this is a management decision since, if it was left to the players, there would be some who would still refuse to wear a helmet," said Eagleson.

The players agreed that a president would be elected every two years from alternate NHL divisions.

Berenson was elected from the West Division's St. Louis Blues to replace outgoing president Norm Ullman of Toronto. Lou Angotti of Chicago Black Hawks remains as vice-president.

Saanichton Takes Two

Saanichton came up victorious in two out of three Peninsula Basketball League games played Tuesday at Mt. Newton High School, Saanichton.

Midget girls downed Brentwood 18-9 and the pre-midget boys defeated Brentwood 16-10. Cordova Bay bounced Saanichton bantam boys, 42-31, in a third game.

Time Outs Expected In Gambling Inquiry

DETROIT (AP) — The federal grand jury investigation into sports gambling operations could be an off and on affair that might last several months.

U.S. Attorney James Brickley said Tuesday that the 23 members of the grand jury "will be meeting from time to time and this could go on for a couple of months at least."

Brickley previously said the grand jury was to reconvene Tuesday, but apparently switched signals at the last minute.

He declined to say when and where they would meet and who would be subpoenaed.

Fourteen persons were arrested, 10 of them on New Year's Day, in gambling raids in Michigan, Nevada, Arizona, New York and Mississippi. More than $600,000 was confiscated in the raids. The 14 arrested were charged with violating federal wagering laws.

Brickley said that after witnesses testify their names probably will be made available through the U.S. marshal's office in Detroit.

ROCKY 'MY BUDDY'

'TIME TO QUIT'

Clay Gracious in Film Defeat

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"It takes a good champion to lose like that," said Cassius Clay as he watched himself knocked out by Rocky Marciano in the 13th round of their computerized fight shown Tuesday night in movie houses across the United States and Canada.

"Rocky was my buddy, and he really wanted to see it," he added.

All during the fight he seemed to be moving with the punches, his head bobbing back and forth a little. Now and then he gripped the sides of his seat.

In the 11th, as the two undefeated heavyweight champions traded punches, Clay started rocking in his seat and shouted over and over, "I'm going to put something on him now, I'm going to put something on him now, I'm going to put something on him now."

The round ended even and Clay shouted, "If I lose, that computer was in Alabama." The crowd laughed loudly and there were some cheers.

After the fight, as he pushed through more than 430 fans who had paid $5 each, Clay said:

"It's time to quit when a 45-year-old man beats you."

At Miami Beach, Fla., Barbara Marciano, Rocky's widow, watched her husband knock out Cassius and said, "I was nervous just like I used to be."

Mrs. Marciano added:

"It made me shiver when the crowd here roared. Rocky would have liked that if he had been here.

"It all seemed very realistic."

Reed Healthy Enough To Power East Stars

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Willis Reed, relieved by x-rays which shows he had a nervous stomach and not an ulcer, scored 21 points Tuesday night to lead the East to a 142-135 victory over the West in the 20th annual National Basketball Association all-star game.

Reed was joined in the 21-point class by Oscar Robertson as the East gained its 14th victory against six defeats in the series.

Reed, the 6-foot-8 captain of the New York Knicks, was voted most valuable player.

He underwent x-rays in New York Monday and then came to Philadelphia after the pictures showed he was suffering from stomach spasms and not the ulcer he had feared.

Middleweight Debut

ROOM IN VANCOUVER FOR POILE, GADSBY?

DETROIT (AP) — A report in the Detroit News that Bill Gadsby will be named coach of the new Vancouver team in the National Hockey League drew a quick denial today from Gadsby.

"That is not right . . . I don't know where they get that stuff," said Gadsby. "I haven't talked with anyone."

The News also reported that Bud Poile would become general manager at Vancouver.

There was no immediate comment from Poile, a veteran player and official.

Gadsby was fired as coach of the Detroit Red Wings Oct. 16, shortly after the NHL season began. He was named director of pro scouting for the Wings 12 days later.

Poile, a former player with the Red Wings, was discharged recently as general manager of Philadelphia Flyers.

VIKING VIEWS

By Brian Butters

This coming weekend should be referred to as "travelling week" for University of Victoria athletes as six teams in four different sports head out of town for league competitions.

Among the travellers will be coach Bob Bell and his basketball Vikings.

Uvic's playoff chances in the Western Canada Inter-collegiate Athletic Association basketball loop were slimmed considerably when Vikings dropped two games against Manitoba teams last weekend.

However, the squad will have an opportunity to improve its record as it takes on three Alberta teams on a five-day road trip tarting Thursday.

Scheduled are games against University of Alberta on Friday, Lethbridge University on Saturday and a Monday match with University of Calgary.

In order for Vikings to clinch a playoff spot in the WCIAA, they will have to win most of their remaining games, which include two encounters with undefeated UBC.

★ ★ ★

Currently Vikings are tied for fourth spot with the hard-charging University of Winnipeg Wesmen. However Vikings have a game in hand, having played eight of 16 league games.

With improved performances from Mike Taafe and Brian Brumwell in recent games, Vikings are in serious contention for a playoff berth and could pull off an upset or two in their next few games.

The junior varsity men's team, under first-year coach Gary Taylor, is enjoying a very fine year of competition. They have won 15 of their 16 games, losing only to Vancouver Killarney, whom they defeated the very next night by a considerable margin.

The squad is gunning for the Canadian junior championship, the title Victoria Chinooks formerly chased before their extinction last year. The way Jayvees have been playing, they have a better than average chance of attaining that lofty pinnacle.

Sparked by a contingent of former high school stars, Jayvees have dominated their opponents with accurate shooting and good rebounding. Chris Hall, Brent Mullin and Fergie Andison all won B.C. championships while under Taylor at Oak Bay, and Gord Hoshal won with Vic High last season.

Probably the most impressive of Jayvees' victories is their triumph over Simon Fraser University's junior varsity team. Four players from the talented SFU. varsity squad also play for their juniors, but even they were not enough to contain the potent attack of the Uvic crew.

With any luck, Taylor's Jayvees could go, all the way to the Canadian final and bring back the championship Chinooks won several years ago.

This weekend they travel to the mainland to take on Vancouver City College in two games.

Also on the move will be the junior varsity women's basketball team, who travel to UBC to play in an invitational tournament involving Senior "B" teams.

★ ★ ★

On the home front, Howie Tooby's Vikettes are in good shape for their stretch drive in the Inter-City Women's Basketball League.

Presently tied for second place, the girls have a chance to move up to a first-place tie as they host Mt. Pleasant and Molsons Saturday night and Sunday afternoon at the Uvic gym.

Uvic's male volleyballers will get a taste of international competition this weekend as they travel to a tournament in Calgary involving about 15 teams from the U.S. and Canada. Among others competing in the round-robin tournament will be the U.S. Air Force Academy and McMaster University.

Also competing in a tournament away from home will be Uvic's judo team. An annual tournament in Steveston on the mainland will provide the competition.

Local rugby competition will feature Uvic's Vikings seeking their ninth consecutive victory with they play at Cowichan on Sunday.

Soon to start collegiate competition, Vikings have opened up a seemingly insurmountable lead in the standings of the first division of the Victoria Rugby Union.

★ ★ ★

Beacon Hill Park will be the site of a B.C. Cross Country League race involving Uvic runners. Larry Corbett and Charlie Thorne will be among the local harriers entered.

Two of the top teams in the WCIAA hockey league will be in town at the weekend for two games with Uvic's hockey Vikings. University of Alberta Golden Bears and University of Calgary Dinosaurs will meet the Vikings on Friday night and Saturday afternoon respectively.

Challenge by Flood Postponed to Feb. 3

NEW YORK (AP)—Hearing of a suit by veteran outfielder Curt Flood challenging baseball's reserve clause was postponed until Feb. 3 Tuesday in Federal Court.

Federal Judge Dudley B. Bonsal set the new date when lawyers for Flood and major league baseball appeared in court, responding to an order that baseball show cause why it should not be enjoined from declaring Flood a free agent.

Flood, traded from the St. Louis Cardinals last fall to the Philadelphia Phillies, brought suit against baseball, contending baseball is monopolistic and operates in violation of anti-trust laws.

He said he resented being used as "property."

The reserve clause binds a player to a team for life, or until he is sold, traded, or released. Baseball officials contend that erasure of the clause—twice upheld in the Supreme Court—would destroy the game.

RALPH KINER
. . . misses again

Kiner Strikes Out Again But Boudreau's In

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lou Boudreau, 52-year-old former player-manager for Cleveland Indians, became the 114th member of the Baseball Hall of Fame Tuesday, saying "baseball is the greatest sport in the world and no one should temper with it."

Dwelling at considerable length on Curt Flood's present anti-trust suit against baseball testing the reserve clause, Boudreau said the game had "gone along with the clause for many years, it has been tested in the courts and I feel that it could destroy the game to tamper with it."

Boudreau, a five-time all-star shortstop who later managed four major league teams, received 232 votes from the Baseball Writers' Association of America and was the only player elected in the 1970 balloting. A total of 300 ballots were cast and an individual had to be named on 75 per cent of the ballots to gain election to the baseball shrine in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Boudreau will be formally inducted into the hall of fame in ceremonies in July.

As a manager he was known as an innovator. He is credited with originating the famed "Ted Williams Shift"—a manoeuvre that moved three infielders to the right side of the diamond, where Williams hit most of his balls.

OTHERS MISS OUT

Ralph Kiner, former National League home run king with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was runnerup in the balloting with 167 votes, followed by Gil Hodges, former Brooklyn Dodger first baseman and currently manager of the world champion New York Mets, with 145 votes.

Early Wynn, last major league pitcher to achieve the plateau of 300 career victories, was fourth with 140 votes. Next in line were former St. Louis Cardinal outfielder Enos Slaughter with 133, ex-Cardinal first baseman Johnny Mize with 126, one-time Cardinal shortstop Marty Marion with 120 and ex-Cardinal infielder Red Schoendienst and former Dodger infielder Pee Wee Reese with 97.

SPORTSCASTER NOW

Boudreau, father-in-law of Detroit Tiger pitcher star Dennis McLain, is currently a sportscaster for station WGN in Chicago.

Boudreau managed the Indians for nine seasons from 1942 to 1950, then moved to the Red Sox for three seasons, to the expansion Kansas City club for two seasons and one campaign as a managerial team for the Chicago Cubs.

He was released by the Indians as a player in 1950 and played in 1951 and 1952 with the Red Sox before becoming their manager in 1952.

GREATEST SEASON

His greatest single season in baseball was in 1948, when the inspirational player-manager of the Indians led the tribe to the American League pennant in a dramatic playoff game with the Boston Red Sox, and a World Series conquest over Boston Braves.

He was named the American League's most valuable player that season and led the league in batting with a .355 average. He compiled a lifetime batting average of .295 in 14 years of major league ball, 12 with the

SEATTLE'S FUTURE LOOKS 'VERY BAD'

SEATTLE (AP) — A "last ditch" effort to save the Seattle Pilots' franchise was planned Tuesday by Mayor Wes Uhlman, who said he had received confidential information which made the outlook "very bad."

Uhlman said he would hold a news conference today to announce details of the final push to keep the American League expansion club here.

He declined to say what the nature of his new information was. The league has given Seattle interests until 2 p.m. Thursday to solve the Pilots' financial problems.

Uhlman's disclosure came amid unconfirmed reports that William Daley of Cleveland, majority owner of the club, and Dewey Soriano, president, were in Dallas, a city that wants the Seattle franchise.

Uhlman said he had been in touch with the group of Seattle businessmen headed by theatre owner Fred Danz, which is trying to buy majority control of the ball club, but the mayor said his efforts would not be restricted to the Danz faction.

Danz, meantime, said he knew nothing about Uhlman's latest information and said of his own group:

"We are working as hard as we can. There still are some alternatives available. We are meeting with possible financial supporters and exploring every avenue to keep the Pilots in Seattle. We are meeting again tonight, but it will be more informational than anything."

Record-Breaking Pace by Canucks

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Canucks banged in five goals in the second period as they rolled to an overwhelming 9-3 victory over San Diego Gulls in Western Hockey League action Tuesday before 8,241 fans.

The victory was the first-place Canuck's 21st win in their last 25 games and moved them 19 points out in front of second-place Portland Buckaroos, idle Tuesday.

Ted McCaskill, Ted Taylor and Germain Gagnon led the Canucks attack with two goals apiece, while Paul Andrea, with his 28th of the season, Brad Selwood and Murray Hall added a goal apiece.

Canucks jumped to a 1-0 first-period lead, led 6-1 by the end of the second and then outscored the Gulls in the final period to grab their 15th consecutive home-ice victory.

The win tied a league record for the most consecutive wins at home, established in the 1963-64 season by Denver.

Swedish-Driven Porsches Lead In Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO (Reuters) — Swedish farmer Bo Waldegaard was holding the lead Tuesday night in a 1-2-3 formation of West German Porsches in the second stage of the Monte Carlo auto rally.

Waldegaard, 27, who won the rally for Porsche last year, was 38 seconds ahead of the field at the end of the fourth speed section of the second stage. Porsches driven by Gerard Larousse and Ake Anderson of Sweden were in second and third spots respectively.

An Italian Lancia driven by Sandro Munari was in a strong challenging position in fourth place.

Bulldog's Pals Suffer Reversal

Expos Boosting Canadian Entity

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Montreal Expos have been asked to consider London as a future site for a Triple A baseball league farm team.

Bob Harris, a local land developer, said he made the inquiry Monday "just out of curiosity to see if they were at all interested," and added that the response was "favorable."

Danny Merendez, director of minor league operations for the Expos, said in an interview Tuesday that London's geographical location enhanced the city's hopes of acquiring a franchise in the International League.

"Naturally, the Expos are interested in another Canadian entity," he said. "Our club doesn't belong to Quebec alone."

Maplettes Post Fourth Straight

Victoria Maplettes rolled over University of Victoria Vikettes in a stretch drive for the final playoff spot of Inter-City Senior Women's Basketball League.

The defending Canadian-champion Maplettes picked up their fourth straight victory and sole possession of fourth place by downing Vikettes, 49-37, Tuesday night at the Uvic gymnasium.

Maplettes are now two points ahead of Vancouver Molsons and can clinch the final playoff spot and fourth place by winning their last two games at the weekend.

Molsons provide the opposition for Maplettes on Saturday night and a game against Mt. Pleasant Legion on Sunday will end the schedule. Both games are at Central Junior High School.

Vikettes also complete their schedule this weekend with games against Mt. Pleasant on Saturday and Molsons on Sunday — both at Uvic gymnasium.

MARY SPARKLES

Mrs. Coutts scored 22 points to pace Maplettes, who led 22-16 at the intermission.

Both Marcia McIntyre and Laurie Sawden, who were given the task of marking Mrs. Coutts, fouled out within a few minutes of each other and left the Maplettes in command of both boards late in the game.

Meanwhile, in Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association women's basketball league play, UBC Thunderettes and University of Saskatchewan Huskiettes continued to plague rivals.

Vikettes also play in the WCIAA loop.

Thunderettes swept a two-game series from University of Alberta Pandas with a 53-32 victory to follow a 62-32 win on Monday. Huskiettes extended a winning streak to six games with an 81-30 triumph over University of Calgary.

EMPLOYERS
Need help with your New Payroll Report and Remittance Statement?

The WCBs new assessment procedure is now in effect and all employers under the Workmen's Compensation Act should have received a payroll report and remittance statement.

It is important that the form be filled in and returned to the WCB on the due date shown.

A special telephone service has been arranged for employers who find it inconvenient to contact the Board during regular business hours so they can get points on the new form clarified.

An assessment officer will answer any question you have about completing the payroll report. Remember this is a special evening telephone service only—the WCB office will not be open during the evening hours.

Federal Grain Policy Lashed by Opposition

By KEVIN DOYLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs flailed the government's grain policies Tuesday as inhuman, ineffective and inefficient.

The comments were made during Commons debate on a Conservative non-confidence motion condemning the government for its alleged failure to make full use of grain-storage facilities and for not setting up a system of payments for grain stored on farms.

The Commons easily defeated the motion and an NDP amendment on separate 107-to-78 votes.

The NDP motion called for a government guarantee of deficiency payments for the 1968-69 crop year of at least $1.95 ½ a bushel—the recommended minimum under the International Grains Arrangement.

It also recommended the appointment of a federal transport controller to co-ordinate all shipments of grain.

Earlier Tuesday, Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled in favor of an opposition move that forced before the House a controversial committee report on Arctic sovereignty.

CLAIM HAD NO RIGHT

The government argued Monday that only Ian Watson (L—Laprairie), chairman of the northern development committee, had the right to bring the report before the Commons and that Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca), committee vice-chairman, could not do so.

But Mr. Lamoureux, in a precedent-setting ruling, said any MP can put before the House a motion for concurrence in a committee report.

The committee report calls for fast government action to assert control over vessels passing through Canada's Arctic archipelago.

Liberal spokesmen say the government will not likely be prepared to concur in such a strong recommendation but a full debate on the motion was being scheduled for Thursday, a government spokesman said.

During the debate on grain policy, Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar), who moved the NDP amendment, said farmers in Western Canada are prepared to accept federal government policy if it is clearly enunciated to them.

"But no policy, no indication of policy is being put before them—it's inhuman."

Stanley Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie) said the "miserable government" has been ineffective and inefficient, showing more concern for a handful of grain-elevator employees than with the farm population of Western Canada.

BLASTS INACTION

While towns and villages were dying on the Prairies there was space available at the Lakehead for 70,000,000 bushels of wheat. Instead of moving wheat from the farms, the government was making it comfortable for the railways.

Mr. Korchinski introduced the non-confidence motion.

Otto Lang, minister without portfolio responsible for the Canadian wheat board, said elevators at Thunder Bay will be filled before the navigation season opens.

It was "quite in the usual fashion" for the amount of grain at the Lakehead to drop significantly towards the end of the shipping season.

But the government had taken steps to insure the elevators will be full in time for the navigation season opening.

He said the government intends to export 375,000,000 bushels of wheat before the end of the current crop year.

"We'll see one of the most rapid movements of wheat out of the country we've ever seen in the remainder of the crop year," Mr. Lang said.

PUSHES EAST MARKET

Rene Matte (Creditiste—Champlain) said he does not understand why the government does not try to sell more western grain in Eastern Canada, particularly in Quebec.

The eastern market would be almost large enough to consume the entire wheat surplus, he said.

Clifford Downey (PC—Battle River) said the wheat board has developed "dictatorial powers" over the Western farm economy and should be replaced by a modern, aggressive sales agency.

Richard R. Southam (PC—Qu'Appelle - Moose Mountain) and Deane Gundlock (PC—Lethbridge) lashed the government for being insensitive to the urgency of grain problems. People were leaving the Prairies to find work elsewhere, they said.

A. B. Douglas (L—Assiniboia) said the government had received some bad advice on grain problems. He said reliance on business and labor to alleviate some of the problems had been a mistake.

ROOM AT INN AND CASH TO GO

VANCOUVER (CP) — Motel desk clerk Peter Beekman spent the early hours of Tuesday signing in guests and handing out money — at gunpoint.

He lost $100 to one bandit who said he had a friend with a gun outside. He had just told his story to police when in walked another armed man, who took the $23 left in the till.

IN MONTREAL

Black Students' Trial Stalls

MONTREAL (CP) — Selection of a jury was stalled Tuesday by lack of prospects in the conspiracy trial of 11 Trinidad students, charged in connection with the Feb. 11, 1969, computer-smashing incident at Sir George Williams University.

Only nine jurymen had been selected out of a possible 82 Tuesday, second day of the trials.

Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench ordered the sheriff to seek out a new panel, but rejected a defence recommendation that new jurors be sought from Montreal's black community.

The defence made the recommendation because of the "nature of the case," whose defendants are all black.

Possible racial prejudice was a key defence challenge in the quizzing of the all-male panel of prospective jurors. Another was the effect of "gratuitous statements" in the Montreal press commenting on the Feb. 11 incident.

In Quebec, women are not allowed to sit on a jury.

The 11 black students—two of them women—each face five charges, including conspiracy to commit arson and conspiracy to destroy property.

A warrant of arrest was issued Monday for Kennedy Frederick, 30, who did not show up for his trial. Another defendant, Andrew Rennie, 23, is ill.

The charges stem from the two-week occupation and subsequent violence of the centre by students opposed to the makeup of a hearing board investigating charges of racial discrimination by Professor Perry Anderson.

Anderson was exhonerated of all charges by the hearing board last July.

The parents of six juveniles were fined a total of $1,500 in connection with the incident and the jury trials of 59 other persons on conspiracy charges begin March 2. Fifteen students are yet to be tried by judge.

Child's Body Found In Old Surrey Dump

SURREY, B.C. (CP) — Two months of worry, hope and prayer ended for the Alex Azarcon family Tuesday with the discovery of their seven-year-old daughter's body in a flooded excavation in this Vancouver-area town.

Police found Evangeline Azarcon's body after a three-hour search of the former municipal garbage dump, still clad in the clothing the child wore when she disappeared Nov. 20.

They had been led to the scene by a citizen who reported seeing a plaid lunch bucket floating in the flood waters.

The bucket, which bore the girl's name, was one of the articles she carried at the time of her disappearance, and had been described for thousands of searchers who then were combing the lower Fraser Valley for her.

Police said the body appeared to have been lying in the dump since shortly after Evangeline's disappearance.

Vancouver homicide detectives were called in to help Surrey RCMP with the investigation.

The man who found the lunch bucket was not identified. Police said he was looking for some way to drain his land at the time.

Police cordoned off the area and prevented reporters or others from approaching the spot where the body was found. The area was being drained to assist in the search for clues.

The Azarcons have four other children aged two to nine.

Police said one of many clues being checked was a report that a man driving a red and white automobile had been seen near the area where the body was found.

Brian Bussiere, 13, told police he saw a man make about five visits to the area. He described the man as probably more than 30 years old and that he last saw him about four days ago.

Press Split On Council

Times News Services

OTTAWA—Opposite opinions about desirability of a national press council to police Canadian journalism were expressed today by two Ontario newspapers in briefs to a special Senate committee on mass media.

Le Droit of Ottawa argued in favor of the idea while the Brantford Expositor said it would be a backward step from the readers' viewpoint.

John C. Preston, general manager of The Expositor, and Peter M. Preston, executive editor, also suggest that grievances against newspapers are handled better locally than through establishment of a national press council on the British pattern.

The Preston brothers, third-generation owner-managers of a newspaper founded in 1852 and owned by their family since 1890, say they believe the links between a community and its newspaper are stronger when the paper is owned "by people active in management and keenly interested in their community."

Referring to suggestions that Canada should have a press council, the Preston brothers comment:

"The difficulty and expense of setting up and operating a press council in Canada cannot in our opinion be justified by the claim that it would improve on the present method of grievance handling."

'Complain Directly to Newspaper'

Most Canadian newspapers were read in well-defined localities where readers can make complaints quickly and directly to the newspaper office. If a complaint had substance, the newspaper could make amends in print.

In Britain, the council was set up to deal with grievances against nationally-circulated newspapers with a propensity for inaccuracy and sensationalism.

"These faults are not found in the Canadian press to anything like the same extent."

The Expositor submission adds:

"Such arguments as we have seen for a press council in Canada have totally overlooked the case we have made for the Canadian practice of leaving complaints—the bulk of them minor—to be handled on the reader-to-editor basis which is now working well in our case."

Le Droit, which says it is a Roman Catholic and French-Canadian organ serving primarily French-speaking readers both in Ontario and western Quebec, advocates establishment of provincial press councils and government assistance for the education of French-language students in journalism.

Press councils could help guarantee freedom of the press—the right to publish information and comment, subject to the same legal limits imposed on individual citizens.

A national council would be the ultimate goal, but provincial councils would be more readily accepted by Quebec journalists at present, Le Droit says.

In addition to protecting press freedom, a press council might be useful as a channel for any financial aid the state might one day want to provide to newspapers, Le Droit says, although it opposes government subsidies to newspapers as dangerous.

Direct government benefits to newspapers "can become very heavy chains and put the freedom of the press in danger."

OPPOSES STATE AID

While opposing direct state aid to newspapers, Le Droit says it approves of indirect assistance such as reduced postal rates for journals and provincial government finance for journalist schools.

Le Droit says it regarded reduced postal rates—increased last year—more as a subsidy to readers than to publications themselves.

'Cup of Water Better Than Fire Truck'

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP)—An appointed member of the territorial council Tuesday pleaded for a fire protection system in every house in the territories.

J. Gordon Gibson, retired businessman from Vancouver, said money should be spent on sprinkler systems instead of fire marshal's salaries and firefighting equipment.

Mr. Gibson said the territories should not spend "one more cent on fire marshals because they get there in time for the inquest."

Deputy Fire Marshal Len Adrian told council that many homes in the Territories are heated by oil, and water is not effective in dousing oil fires.

Mr. Gibson also criticized a firefighting display he witnessed at Baker Lake, about 550 miles northwest of here, last October.

The local volunteer fire brigade was using a new $17,000 track firefighting vehicle, said Mr. Gibson and with poor results.

He said a cup of water would have been more effective than the new vehicle.

Deputy Commissioner John Parker said the administration should conduct a study on the feasibility of a fire prevention system in every home.

Settlement Made

CRANBROOK (CP)—The provincial department of highways has made a settlement with another rancher in the Kootenay Valley for land which will be covered with water when the Libby Dam is completed in 1972. There still are 60 ranchers to settle with.

Tight Money Strangling B.C. Farmer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The high cost of money is the main problem facing Canadian farmers today, Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford of British Columbia said Tuesday night.

Addressing the annual banquet of the Dairy Farmers of Canada, Mr. Shelford said the federal government has been telling farmers they should move out of wheat into some other production.

A former rancher himself, he said it is not possible to start a successful beef operation on money costing 10 to 12 per cent interest.

"I think all we hear about moving into these different field is a lot of empty words until interest rates come down," he said.

Mr. Shelford, who called last week for an emergency meeting of Canadian agriculture ministers to examine ways of marketing grain overseas, said it was disturbing that Canada's share of the world feed grain sales had dropped 13 per cent each year for the last two years.

"I think we have to get out and sell and I am convinced that we can do it and the time to start is right now."

SICK CHAIN LETTER

TORONTO (CP) — Post office sorters Tuesday began removing from the mail hundreds of unstamped chain letters telling of miracles performed by a sick little girl.

The letters, bearing the mark 6CFC instead of a stamp, predict good luck for those who continue the chain and bad luck for those who break it.

Post office spokesman Douglas Baker said the letters, which contained instructions not to use a stamp, first appeared Monday and began to appear in volume Tuesday.

One letter read:

"This is a chain letter from Landers. Someone sent me this and now I am sending it to you. Do the same for people you know.

"This letter comes from a little, sick girl in Landers. Whoever breaks the chain will have neither luck nor happiness. This has already happened. The sick girl performs miracles unexpectedly.

"Happiness will befall you in 48 hours. This letter must not be destroyed or lost. Copy it seven times and send it to seven people.

"Don't put a stamp on it. Observe what happens to you in 48 hours."

What happens, Mr. Baker said, is that "they gotta pay 12 cents."

Some letters are addressed to London, Ont., and Oshawa, others to Rochester and Cleveland in the United States.

Suit Charges Topless Discrimination

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit gogo bar owner has filed a suit charging his girl dancers are suffering discrimination since they cannot legally dance totally topless, but male dancers can.

Last Sept. 17, a girl dancer employed by Theodore Manolakas and John Kratsas at the Sip and Chat bar was arrested for indecent exposure when she peeled off her pasties.

The federal suit brought Monday alleges the ordinances used to arrest the dancer and owners are unconstitutional because the laws "deny the constitutional and civil rights to grant, seek, obtain and hold employment as entertainers without regard to sex."

The suit also maintains the laws crimp the dancers' "freedom of expression, due process and equal protection of the law" under the federal constitution.

Police Masquerade Stopped

MIAMI (AP) — A delivery boy who officers say abandoned 400 telegrams to take up a new profession shaking down motorists as a policeman has landed in jail.

Ernesto Pantoja, 29, a Cuban exile, was charged with impersonating a police officer and possession of stolen property after officers said they found his phoney police car filled with uniforms, two police guns and traffic ticket books.

Pantoja, masquerading in a police uniform, had been stopping cars and demanding $20 from drivers for tearing up traffic tickets he had written, the police department said.

Police said a search of Pantoja's residence revealed 400 undelivered telegrams. A spokesman for Western Union said Pantoja had been a bicycle delivery boy.

Police said Pantoja had done an elaborate remodelling job on his small foreign-made auto to imitate a police vehicle, complete with dummy radio antenna, dummy microphone, a plug-in spotlight and police band walkie-talkie.

Theatre a Dying Art In Canada: Director

TORONTO (CP) — It's a waste of time to study theatre in university—and anyway, theatre is a dying art in Canada, says director Timothy Bond.

He directs funny plays for people of all ages but he's not funny when discussing Canada's theatre establishment.

Bond, 27, said in an interview that public subsidies to the theatre in Canada should be reduced because they contribute to an "attitude of complacency."

Early in December he directed a comedy entitled Colors in the Dark, by James Reaney, which played to sell-out crowds at the Playhouse Theatre in Vancouver.

Bond said he believes Colors in the Dark is "solving the generation gap." He considered the play, which deals with the problems of growing up, the high point of his five-year career as a professional director.

"Colors in the Dark appeals to both sides of the generation gap—which is much wider in Vancouver than anywhere else in the country," he said.

"At this play, older people suddenly found themselves sitting next to long-haired kids. At the end of the play they all go out smiling.

"The play is filling a special need and it's paying for itself. It's much better than the situation in most regional theatres which operate like churches—places where people go for culture instead of for fun."

PLAY IT SAFE

In most of Canada, Bond said, "theatre has the feeling of being a dying art."

"Managements are getting so desperate they're playing it safe. So it takes a long time to establish yourself and get the kind of power needed to switch it from being a dying to a living art."

Bond said he hopes to advance on the merits of his ability as a director, but in the face of a "very heavy theatre establishment, your ability to sell comes into it."

"But I have never told lies or taken work I didn't like."

He said Canadian theatre must be heavily subsidized because it can't attract large audiences. "The subsidy has a lot to do toward making it boring. People put on plays they want to do instead of what the city has a need to see.

"If a theatre can't pay its own way it should close."

Bond, who has a science degree from Carleton University, urges young people who want to enter the theatre not to "waste time" studying the subject in university.

"It's better to learn the business in the business."

Tales of Lust And Decadence

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Federico Fellini, an amiable bear of a man, was in town to show his latest film. His evaluation of Hollywood: A nice place to visit, but he wouldn't want to work here.

His countryman, Michaelangelo Antonioni, did make a film in America, the controversial though still unreleased Zabriskie Point. That wouldn't work for Fellini.

"A man must make a film about what he knows, and I do not know America," said the famed Italian director. "It is all right for a writer to say 'the table' in a book. But it is different with a director. He cannot say 'the table'; he must show you everything that is on the table. And for that you must know the place."

Fellini came here with his United Artist picture, Fellini Satyricon, based on Petronius' fragmentary tales of lust and decadence in the Roman Empire. What it's all about, I'm not sure; I'll leave that to the highbrow critics to fatham. But it is most certainly a stunning achievement, packed with visual shocks and limitless imagination.

STORY OF TODAY

The director himself provided an inkling of his purpose:

"The film is not about the Roman Empire at all. It is the story of our civilization today—the desperate search for pleasures, the decadence and alienation, the failure to communicate."

Fellini Satyricon is not your run-of-DeMille Roman specatcle. All the fore and grotesquerries that the Romans were capable of are portrayed on film. The explicit sex caused the film to be condemned by the Roman Catholic church in Italy—"very good for business; some producers try to pay the priests to have their films condemned."

The scope is immense, yet Fellini claimed: "It is a very cheap picture, I think no more than $2,500,000. Most of the sets were impressionistic, you see, painted on a backdrop."

He is displeased with the title.

USED SAME TITLE

"I wanted Satyricon, but then another Italian company made another version, very quick and very bad, and it was banned by the government. Now I could not use the title, so we tried to think what else we could call it."

Fellini is now writng his next script, which he plans to begin filming in April. He sadly reported the collapse of a deal to make a two-part film with Ingmar Bergman.

"Neither Mr. Bergman nor I know what happened. We had both been presented with the project by Martin Poll, who had a releasing arrangement with Universal. The idea was for each of us to do half a picture about our own view of woman. I knew that everyone would expect us to do something terribly serious about Life and Death and God, so I suggested that we go for buffoonery. Mr. Bergman agreed.

"I had finished the script, had done some casting and was ready to start filming in 10 days when Poll said there was a change and he wanted Bergman and me each to make a full-length picture. This is not what we started out to do, so Bergman and I called it off. Now it is in the hands of the lawyers. Too bad. It was a good idea."

City College Issue Not Dead, Board Told

The Greater Victoria school board is continuing negotiations with the department of education on establishing a two-year college in the district.

But there wasn't much light shed on progress in the passing mention the subject got at the school board meeting Monday night.

Board chairman Dr. Carron Jameson said there had been a meeting with Education Minister Donald Brothers last Wednesday and that Brothers said he would consider the subject.

The board's brief calling for a district college went to the education department almost a year ago.

Art Becomes Big Business In Prisons

In the last five years, nearly $1,200,000 worth of paintings, sculptures and other works of art have been sold by prisons in the United States, according to a survey by the Stone-Brandel Centre.

The survey reported that at least 128 of the 747 prisons in the United States have art programs.

Nearly 7,000 prisoners take part in the art programs and they receive the money from the sale of their works, the survey showed.

Other survey findings:

- Stateville Prison at Joliety, Ill., which sells $40,000 worth of art work a year, has the highest sales of any prison in the country.
- The 1,800 artist-inmates there also give it the largest number of registered artists.
- California prisons have the highest average annual art sales, totalling $150,000 a year.

Stone-Brandel primarily is a centre for promoting mental health and has a program aimed at helping prisoners about to be released adjust to life outside of prison.

SVETLANA GETS HER WISH

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The presidium of the Supreme Soviet (parliament) has deprived Svetlana Alliluyeva, the daughter of Josef Stalin, of her Soviet citizenship.

The information bulletin of the Supreme Soviet said today Miss Alliluyeva had been deprived of her citizenship for "misconduct smearing the title of citizen of the U.S.S.R."

★ ★ ★

Miss Alliluyeva, who decided to leave Russia and now lives in Princeton, N.J., said on a U.S. television program in September that she had burned her passport, applied to Moscow to renounce her citizenship and would never return to Russia.

The 45-year-old author arrived in the U.S. in April, 1967.

Stalin's daughter went to the United States from India where she had stayed after the death of her husband, Indian Communist Brajesh Singh.

★ ★ ★

She has since published two books in the West, Twenty Letters to a Friend, which describes her childhood and young womanhood spent at the centre of Soviet power as the daughter of the late dictator, and Only One Year, which contains more impressions of her father and describes her flight to the U.S. and life there.

At Princeton today she said she was pleased with the Soviet decision.

"I'm glad if it is so," Stalin's daughter told Reuters by telephone. "I had applied for that to the Soviet Embassy in Washington through my lawyer last July."

Calley Claims Laird Ordered a Trial

FORT BENNING, Ga. (Reuters) — A military judge will decide Feb. 9 whether high-ranking U.S. officials should testify in the case of Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. charged with murdering more than 100 South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai hamlet March 16, 1968.

Calley's lawyer, George Latimer, has said he wants to question Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird, Army Secretary Stanley Resor, and Gen. William Westmoreland, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

The defence made its request for the subpoenaing of the officials after alleging that Laird obtained permission from President Nixon to go ahead with the murder case against Calley.

Latimer said that the order to proceed was then passed down the military chain of command, resulting in the drawing up of charges by officers at Fort Benning, and that this prejudiced Calley's case.

OFFICERS INFLUENCED?

Lt.-Col. Reid Kennedy, the presiding judge, said Tuesday he would first determine whether officers at Fort Benning, including the commander, Maj.-Gen. Orwin Talbott, were influenced by Washington officials when they drew up the charges.

He indicated that if the officers convinced him they were not influenced by superiors he would not require the Washington officials to testify.

Kennedy said another question to be brought up at next month's hearing would be Calley's request for dismissal of all charges on the grounds that he could not receive a fair trial because of worldwide publicity given to the case.

The judge postponed for at least three weeks a decision on this question. A ruling could be made Feb. 9 but it was considered unlikely.

Capt. Aubrey Daniel, the military prosecutor, changed the approximate number of civilians Calley is accused of killing from 109 to 102. Daniel explained the seven deletions were made because the deaths duplicated the killings alleged in another charge.

'Gee I Dunno, Paper Tiger What's New With You?'

WARSAW (Reuters) — The U.S. was left waiting and wondering today when China would reply to proposals for improving their mutual relations following the resumption of diplomatic meetings in Warsaw Tuesday.

U.S. Ambassador Walter J. Stoessel Jr., and Chinese Charge d'Affaires Lei Yang, each supported by three aides, talked for an hour in the Chinese embassy, but parted without fixing a date for their next meeting.

Both sides announced the date would be settled later through consultations—presumably in telephone talks between their Warsaw embassies.

The brevity of the encounter—previous ambassadorial talks have averaged about three hours — and failure to name a day for a further session came as an anti-climax to the publicity and speculation which had surrounded the event.

France Guards 50 Jets Against Israeli Grab

CHATEAUDUN, France (AP) — Georges Provot, the freight agent, came out of the cafe after breakfast to give his horse the piece of croissant he hadn't eaten.

Suddenly the sound of jets ripped overhead across the murky sky. The horse shuddered and snorted.

"There they go—there they go," said Provot with a chuckle. But he was wrong; the planes weren't Mirage fighters on their way to Israel in defiance of the government's ban on arms to the Israelis.

Israel paid for 50 Mirages before the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, then was denied them by President Charles de Gaulle's ban on arms to "active belligerents" in the conflict. The jets used to be kept at Istres, a base northwest of Marseille near the Mediterranean coast. An edgy French government moved them 375 miles inland to Chateaudun, 85 miles southwest of Paris, after the Israelis slipped five embargoed gunboats out of Cherbourg harbor on Christmas Eve.

PLANES GUARDED

The planes are well guarded in an immense hangar near the eoutheast corner of the air base just outside town.

You can't see the planes. But you have to take the word of the townspeople and Israeli sources in Paris that they're there.

Col. Albert Costa, the base commander, is polite.

"My instructions are quite precise," he tells a telephone caller. "I can say absolutely nothing. No, I cannot receive you here. . . . No, I cannot make any comment on the planes. I'm terribly sorry."

Mayor Paul Gauchery says the government's policy is bad business because "the Israelis paid for the planes."

When the planes were at Istres, Israeli mechanics maintained them and Israeli pilots flew them regularly.

Local residents are reluctant to talk about whether the Israeli pilots followed the planes here. None was visible around the town.

Six Months For Firing Pistol

A 23-year-old man, who fired a .38-calibre pistol loaded with a blank at a woman in her home, was sentenced in court Tuesday to six months in prison for pointing a firearm, having an unregistered weapon, and keeping an unregistered weapon in a car.

Judge William Ostler sentenced James S. Dobbyn, 643 John, who pleaded guilty, to six months on each charge to be served concurrently.

Ostler said firing the gun was "a wicked thing to do even though it was loaded with a blank", pointing out that the shock could be enough to give anyone a heart attack.

Dobbyn, court was told went ot the Rock Bay Avenue home of the woman Jan. 18 and at about 12:30 a.m. fired the pistol at her in the presence of several other people.

He was stopped shortly after the incident by police at Rock Bay and David at which time the pistol was found in his car.

Stanley A. Kellett, 3217 Wicklow, pleaded guilty to refusing to take a breathalyzer test and was fined $100.

He stopped in his car by police early Tuesday morning and refused to take the test both at his car and later at the police station, saying he wanted to talk to his doctor.

David R. Scott, 40, of no fixed address, was sentenced to six months in prison for stealing $317 from his employer.

"I betrayed the trust of my employer and more importantly I betrayed myself," Scott told Ostler before sentence was passed.

Scott took $317 from the Tally-Ho Travelodge, 3020 Douglas, Dec. 23 where he was working as night desk clerk before he turned himself into police several days later.

John Newell, 21, of 419 Luxton, pleaded guilty to assulting a 15-year-old youth and was fined $35.

John G. Baird told court he was hit in the jaw by the accused during an argument in the street Jan. 11 about 9 p.m. and was struck again as he turned to walk away.

Newell said Baird was using foul language in front of his friends and would not stop when asked.

Ostler said although Newell disliked the language used he should have walked away.

River Ebbs

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Floodwaters in the Nechako River receded Tuesday and several families returned to their homes on nearby Cottonwood Island which was flooded Friday when ice jams backed up the water. Police said more families are due to return to their homes today.

Woman Named Deputy Leader

Mrs. Eileen Dailly, MLA for Burnaby North, was elected deputy leader of the New Democratic Party Tuesday at a caucus meeting of MLAs.

The election of a women to the post is believed to be unique, although NDP leader David Barrett said it is "incidental" that Mrs. Dailly is a woman.

Barrett praised Mrs. Dailly, the education critic of the NDP, for a career of "marked progress" and for her "invaluable assistance."

Mrs. Dailly replaces Alex Macdonald, one of two NDP MLAs for Vancouver East, as deputy leader. Barrett said he regretted Macdonald did not stand for the position and added that the former deputy leader's decision had nothing to do with the leadership question.

Barrett is house leader of the party but still has to win the party leadership at a June convention.

Macdonald said that he did not run for the post because "the NDP has to reshape policies in the next period of time" and that he would be freer to express his views as an ordinary MLA.

Mrs. Dailly was born Eileen Gilmore Feb. 15, 1926 and was educated in Vancouver. She is a former school teacher and served as a Burnaby school trustee, the chairman of a school board, chairman of the Union of Boards of Health of B.C. and on the metropolitan board of health in Vancouver.

Mrs. Dailly was first elected in 1966. She is married to James Dailly and they have one child.

Trustee Seeks At Large Vote

Trustee Dr. Donald Shorting introduced a notice of motion calling for the change. It was referred to the education committee for further discussion.

At the moment, the nine-member board has three representatives from Victoria city, three from Saanich, two from Oak Bay and one from Esquimalt.

The change, which requires department of education approval, would mean voters throughout the school district would elect the nine trustees without regard to municipal boundaries.

Commenting on the proposal today, board chairman Dr. Carron Jameson said there were points to be made for and against it.

It would set a good example in the shift to regionalism, he suggested. And while he has seen no evidence of parochialism, it might lay that fear at rest.

Variance in municipal populations means there is a degree of unequal representation now he said. By the same token, it is possible most or all trustees might be elected from one area, creating the possibility of charges of parochialism.

Ontario to Pay Part of Costs For Health Care

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government announced Tuesda it will pay medical insurance premiums of civil service pensioners and widows for five months and hospital insurance premiums for six months. It then will pay 65 per cent of the health insurance premium and 40 per cent of hospital insurance costs.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 21, 1970 —PAGE 25

Shirley Baker, Co-ordinator of Women's Activities at the University of Victoria, has just returned from a year in East Africa and a six-month stint in Ottawa as a volunteer worker with Canadian University Service Overseas. One of the first things to go up on the white walls of her Beach Drive apartment was her "conversation piece," a painting of an African elephant. (Irving Strickland Photo)

CUSO Needs Specialist Volunteers As Aid Role Changes in Africa

By JUDI FREEMAN

When Shirley Baker left Victoria for Tanzania in September, 1968, she took with her three valuable exports: administrative abilities, previous experience with developing African countries and a desire to help.

Mrs. Baker returned to Victoria at Christmas, 1969, with a clear conviction that Canadian University Service Overseas needs many more highly skilled, experienced volunteers to work in Africa.

Mrs. Baker is co-ordinator of women's activities at the University of Victoria.

CUSO is a private organization which offers aid in the form of manpower. Host countries decide which jobs must be filled, which skills are needed, and how much a CUSO volunteer will be paid.

In 1968 Mrs. Baker was asked by the national board to be regional representative for East and Central Africa CUSO workers.

Acceptance meant Mrs. Baker would need a leave of absence from Uvic. But acceptance would also mean a return to Tanzania where she had lived for 18 years and where her three children were born.

The choice was made. Mrs. Baker and her youngest daughter, Irene, returned to the country they had left in 1963 and Mrs. Baker put her administrative experience to work.

Her area covered Kenya, Uganda, Malawi, Ethiopia, Zambia and Tanzania, and she was in charge of 300 volunteers.

"CUSO has been offering middle-range manpower to countries which need aid. But now that their own university graduates are filling this need, especially in East Africa, fewer CUSO workers will be needed," she said in an interview.

"CUSO has peaked now," she said. "We expect that by 1975 our program in East Africa will be much smaller."

What will be needed are people with highly-specialized professional and technical skills who are willing to volunteer their services for a short time.

Hinging on this need for skilled people is a change in the financial formula of CUSO, Mrs. Baker believes.

At present, CUSO receives a government grant but must depend on host countries for salaries and housing.

"It costs the East African countries $1,000,000. This is a lot for developing countries. It isn't much for Canada."

In order to entice experienced people to work for CUSO, higher salaries would have to be paid, a luxury a developing country cannot afford.

"Other countries pay their people to help in developing nations. Why doesn't Canada?"

Mrs. Baker spent a full year in East Africa and completed 1969 as that area's director in Ottawa.

When she returns to her position as Uvic's co-ordinator of women's activities Feb. 1, she will again be working with the local CUSO committee.

She considers local groups as "key committees" in the organization because they do the recruiting and personal interviews.

In the past the Uvic committee has recruited a high per capita number of volunteers. This year, recruitment is down, said Mrs. Baker.

Mrs. Benson Recalls Dictionary Courtship

By ELIZABETH RYNASKO

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Benson conducted their courtship with the help of a dictionary.

Mr. Benson, now the federal finance minister, was then one of several Canadian servicemen invited by his future wife's family to enjoy the hospitality of their home.

His wife was then Marie-Louise Van Laer, a native of Nijmegen, Holland. She knew some English, learned in school, but says she did not become fluent until after she had married her soldier and lived in Canada for some time.

Nijmegen and its people had been through a bad time. As the Germans retreated in the face of the Allied advance, Mrs. Benson says they burned buildings in many parts of the city.

"We were evacuated from our home to the outskirts. I remember how we piled what baggage we could on bicycles and pushed them through the city.

"My mother was very brave and walked steadily along in a straight line but I was terrified. The shells were flying overhead and armored vehicles and other transports were racing through the streets."

Mrs. Benson is called Mylou, a nickname given her by her late mother.

"Marie-Louise was so long that by the time my mother finished saying it I was gone, so she shortened it to Mylou."

The Bensons and two of their children live on a ranch-style house on the outskirts of Kingston. Mrs. Benson's Dutch background is reflected in the rug tapestries that cover tables and serve as wall hangings and in her love of flowers and plants that brighten her home indoors and out.

The two oldest Benson children, Robert, 23, and Paul, 19, were married in 1968. Robert now has a daugher, Shelley. Still at home are Peter, 16, and Nancy, 9.

Mrs. Benson has been active in auxillary work in Kingston, with the choir guild of St. George's Anglican Cathedral, and with a Jesuit high school that the older sons attended.

She says her husband is home from Ottawa most weekends and she tries to go with him if he plans a trip that will keep him away for a long time.

She has worked actively in his campaigns since he first entered politics in 1962, and says it was a great effort at first.

"Ben and I were both shy when he first started, but we soon had to get over that. The shyness wears off after a while."

She says she believes more women should be more active in public life.

"I am in favor of more women as members of Parliament and in many other positions of leadership. Why not? Their brains are as good as those of men and sometimes even better."

Reception and State Ball Follow Legislature Opening

The Premier of British Columbia and members of the Executive Council will hold a reception in the Empress Hotel following the opening of the Legislature Thursday. Among the guests will be Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Nicholson.

That evening the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Nicholson will hold a state ball at Government House.

Student Tutors Help Smooth Way For Young Indians

EDMONTON (CP) — About 70 students from the University of Alberta are spending about two hours a week tutoring Indian children in an effort to smooth the transition between isolated northern Alberta high schools and more-sophisticated big-city schools.

The free tutoring service is provided to Indian students—most of them at the high school level—by the university's Wauneita Society. The department of Indian affairs also provides textbooks and a bus to transport students to the university.

The Indian students have shown great enthusiasm for the service.

"We're still receiving applications from the Indian people— and accepting them," said Joan Irving, one of the university's co-ordinators for the program.

Miss Irving said in an interview that English and "new math" are the most requested subjects, but the university has trouble finding students to tutor in new math, possibly because many left high school before the new system began.

"They don't get enough guidance about their programs either. When they decide what they want to do in future, they have a hard time switching programs."

The Indian students who come to Edmonton are boarded with white families during the school year and problems often arise there, Miss Irving said.

"I'd rather be going to school at home," said one 16-year-old girl.

"It's a smaller town and when you're in a small town you know everybody and things are cheaper.

Day Care Centres Seen as Help In Preventing Future Problems

TORONTO (CP) — Aideen Nicholson, who was the top woman in the Ontario department of correctional services, left her job last March at a time when the province was gaining a reputation for its achievement in the rehabilitation of prisoners.

The administrator of adult female institutions subsequently became executive director of a day-care agency.

"So often I thought," Miss Nicholson said in an interview, "if something had been done earlier, if these people had been helped when they were children, they wouldn't be here today."

So now she works with children ranging in age from 2 to 5 at the Cradleship Creche, a United Appeal agency.

At those ages only a few children will display attitudes that could lead to trouble later in life, but when such attitudes arise the teacher is able to take action to alleviate the situation.

One of the things that exasperates Miss Nicholson most is the attitude in some quarters that children have to attend day-care centres because of a lack of parental attention. She says parents send their children to such centres to enrich the child's life and because of the professional attitude of the staff.

The agency, she feels, should expand its services to include children of kindergarten age. Her proposal would involve children after they leave their daily classes.

The children would go to selected neighborhood homes where they would be cared for by neighborhood adults until their parents returned from work. She hopes that funds to help support such a scheme will come from the United Appeal.

"I think some people don't realize just how much children need to talk to adults," Aideen Nicholson said.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Not Approved

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: How can a thing like this happen to two mature, supposedly intelligent people? My best friend's husband and I are hopelessly in love. We have been meeting secretly every chance we are able to swing it, for the past two years.

We realize how much there is at stake if we are caught, but our love is stronger than we are.

We have honestly tried to stop seeing each other, but it always ends up the same way. We can't stay away from each other.

We are together with our own mates quite often, and we feel some guilt, but the four of us enjoy being together, too.

We aren't kids, Abby. We have children in college. It's too bad we didn't meet years ago, but since we didn't, we are making the most of it now.

My husband and his wife are two wonderful people, but something must have been lacking in both our marriages, or this never would have happened. It wasn't a premeditated love affair. It just happened one day accidentally when we were together — alone.

DEAR TWO: You don't want advice, you want someone to tell you that as long as you don't get caught, you aren't hurting anybody.

There is one basic flaw in your thinking. You say, "This wasn't a premeditated love affair — it just happened accidentally." Not true. Nobody falls in love accidentally. He has to break the door down. When two people are mutually attracted to each other, they send out vibrations. (This is the beginning, and it's usually called an innocent flirtation.) If one, or the other rejects these vibrations — no love affair develops.

So far you've gotten away with murder, (or without it) which makes you two of the luckier ones. Knock it off before your luck runs out.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a habit which is not only annoying but downright embarrassing. When we are out, he calls the waitresses, "Dear," or "Honey." I am sure he doesn't intend this to be endearing, at least he assures me that he doesn't, but it still bothers me.

Since he reads your column, perhaps you can make him realize how inconsiderate he is, since he knows I object to it so strongly. — Honey Number One.

DEAR NUMBER ONE: I'll try. Most waitresses prefer to be called Miss. Some have their names embroidered on their uniforms, or wear pins bearing their names — which I think is the most sensible idea of all. But if you really want to help your husband overcome this embarrassing habit, suggest that he ask the waitress what her name is. Then address her by her name.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who had to learn how to grow up the hard way. How did this come about? He accidentally took another man's life and went to prison.

For two years I never saw him. I didn't even write to him. I just did my best to take care of our six children. I never divorced him (for religious reasons) but I got a legal separation.

I got lots of letters from him, but I was so bitter, I never opened any of them. I just put them away. Then one day I sat down and opened each letter, and as I read them, I realized that they had been written by a man I never really knew.

He wasn't begging, and he didn't blame society or anyone else for his mistakes. He was getting the education in prison that he missed when he was a kid. He spent his time reading, and learning things that would enable him to be a better person when he got out.

He never once asked me to take him back. All he asked for was the opportunity to support me and the children.

His parole was turned down this year, but I will wait. I know a better man will come out because he has the right attitude, and I will be proud to take him back. — Beatrice.

CONFIDENTIAL TO PAULA: Forgive him. "Better lose the wool than the lamb." (Greek proverb.)

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Thousands and thousands of my readers have determined not to settle for less than their best. They have decided not to be burdened any longer with overweight, out-of-proportion measurements and fatigue. They have a new image of themselves and are busy making it come true, and they will, in just eight weeks.

Some of you have already lost as much as you wish, but many still have pounds to lose. This is a dangerous time for you who have reduced successfully. Your clothes fit better. You wear a size or two smaller than you did when you started. The compliments are rolling in.

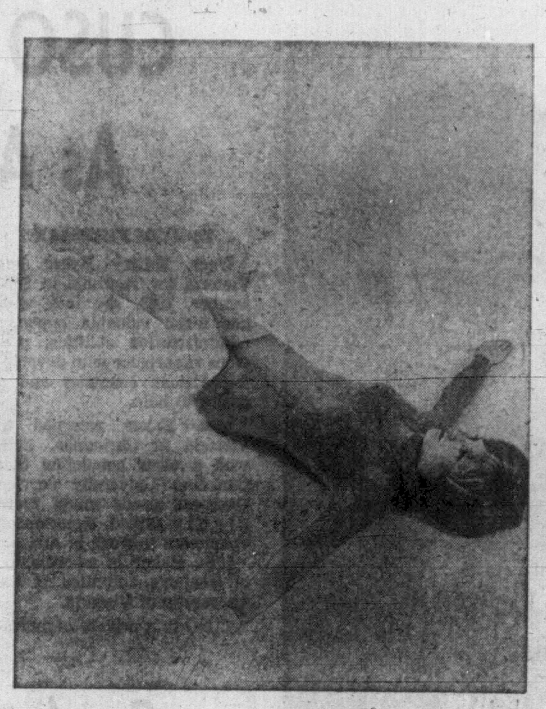

It would be only human to ease the pressure on yourself since the seams have eased. Don't. Don't stop short of your goal.

Sometimes women wait to buy new clothes or get the permanent things they need until they lose all of their overweight. This is a good idea for a while, but it can be taken too far. I think this is the time when you should reward yourself with a permanent if you need one, with a new hairdo and some experimentation with makeup. This will give you a preview of how you can look and will encourage you to continue with diet and exercise, if you need to. Buy a new dress. You can have the seams taken in later—not let out ever again, I hope.

Many readers are wondering just how many calories they require to maintain their ideal weight, once they have reached it. This depends on many factors. There is the minimum caloric need just to keep your body functioning, or you alive. There are the calories needed for your activities.

Your size and activities influence this. However, if you are moderately active you can get a general idea of how many calories you require by multiplying your ideal weight by 18. If you are extremely active add one-fourth more. If your life is sedentary subtract one-fourth. Your scale will tell you whether or not you are right.

If you missed the first part of my Eight Week Beauty Plan and would like to start now to lose from 15 to 20 pounds in the next eight weeks, or if you would like to have the course in book form, send 25 cents, plus 15 cents for postage and handling, with your printed name and address to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

This is a special exercise for flattening the abdomen! Lie on your back with your legs stiff, arms resting on the floor extending out from your shoulders. Raise your left leg high with a stiff knee. As your left leg moves down, raise your right leg. One moves up as the other moves down. After ten times, make the up and down swings very short, keeping the feet close to the floor for another ten counts.

Sensational New Hearing Aid Costs Less Than 10 Cents Per Year To Operate

Space age technology has come to the hearing aid industry. A new hearing aid has been developed that actually costs less than ten cents per year to operate. This is a far cry from the $25 to $70 a year the average hearing aid costs to run. Aid also automatically controls speech interfering noises and can be custom adjusted for correct hearing on the spot. For information write SILVERTONE HEARING AID CENTRE, Simpsons - Sears Hillside: 3190 Shelbourne Street, Victoria.

Onyx Chess Set Brightens Visit

By PENNY SAVER

I don't quite remember how I came to be sitting in Wendy's mother's living room, sipping tea, but I do remember Mathilda was there, taking a bright and somewhat brittle interest in everything our hostess said just to keep the conversation going.

"I know," she was saying as I surfaced from a private distraction, "finding just the right accent for a room is difficult. But I must say you've managed perfectly with this one."

Wendy's mother smiled a smug little smile and almost purred out her answer, "Oh, but I think the recreation room is much nicer. In fact, I just found the finishing touch yesterday. You must come and see it."

The recreation room was so tidy that I wondered when someone had last had fun in it; but it was lovely to look at.

The main colors are cream and deep green with color accents spotted here and there. On one of the main tables sat a chess set ready for play.

Just seeing that chess set made the visit worthwhile. It even made me want to learn how to play chess.

The pieces looked like stubby totem poles roughly carved from onyx. One side was in white stone that seemed to glow in its translucence while the other was a bright turquoise color.

"And I got them on sale," Wendy's mother was telling Mathilda. "They are regularly priced at $19.95 but they are going for $15.95 as long as the stock lasts."

We also learned that these chess sets come in white and black, red, green or brown and are imported from Mexico.

Because these onyx chess pieces are so large (they must be at least two inches tall, if not three) they need a specially large board, so Wendy's mother bought one for $7.95.

This board is made of inlaid wood squares and folds in half for storage. When folded it makes a box large enough to hold an oversized chess set.

We also heard about the other chess sets that were in proportion to this board.

One, made of wood, cost $12.95 and was in dark and light wood tone shades.

The other set was carved from bullhorn in two shades—dark grey-brown for one side and white for the other. The large bullhorn chess set is $32.95. A smaller set of the same material is $24.95.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

Lines Around The Mouth

The mouth area comes in for so much attention, the quicker the lines are smoothed out and made to disappear, the younger you will look. A lotion-like substance 2nd Debut applied nightly will make the lines fill in and the skin become smooth once more. You will probably use 2nd Debut on your entire face to banish dryness, but do use a little extra care around your mouth. After applying the 2nd Debut massage very lightly, until it disappears into your skin. Your drug or dept. store has 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength and you'll find it a genuine delight to use.

DEEP PLUNGE

This jersey dress in cornflower blue plunges to an empire waist, and can be worn with a tie-front bolero jacket.

'Another Shrug . . . And Down Came the Rest'

ROME (UPI) — The nude look is dying hard in the trend-setting fashion houses of Italy.

Valentino tried. He dropped skirts to the calf and ankle and covered up the arms. He also abandoned most of the see-through look.

But next door to his Rome headquarters, the American boutique of La Mendola showed a summer line that finished with an eye-popping evening skirt. Just a full silk-skirt. No top at all.

A six-foot-tall model caused a wild scramble by photographers and cheers from men in the audience — and gasps from the women — when she dropped the pink panels draped over her shoulders. That left the back bare. Another shrug and down came the rest.

Other examples are less extreme, but there was plenty of flesh at Monday's showings, even at houses where the hemlines fell far below the knee.

Federico Forquet brought back the bare-backed halter top for evening wear. He also slashed deep V's in other gowns — which came off to reveal equally low-cut mini-dresses. There also were slinky white damask evening suits with deep V necklines and slits above the knee.

Fabiani went with long skirts, but showed the leg by fixing panels at the front and back which unbuttoned.

Little scarves tied round the head and clanking silver and rhinestone recalled jewelry of Indians. Fancy pocket and yoke trim on suits and dresses evoked the cowboys.

Big straw hats, almost more Mexican than Texas, covered chiffon scarves tied around the head and trailing down one shoulder. The hats went with outfits in brown and white, skirts just below he knee, with pockets, cuffs and deep neck yoked trimmed in flashy brown vinyl with giant studding of silver.

Little black dresses had narrow black scarves tied round the brow. For a necklace, one such sleeveless gown had a silver creation that reached from neck to waist. A silver tube encircled the throat. From it hung three silver disks, each larger than the last, and at the waist there was a silver and rhinestone fringe.

The long look stopped just below the knee every time.

Ankle-length evening dresses or palazzo pajamas had front bursts of accordion pleats for added fullness. One pantsuit had ostrich plumes from a jeweled bodice that bared the midriff.

Montreal Parents Claim Schools Are Too Strict

MONTREAL (CP) — Among the handful of Quebec schools experimenting with new methods of primary teaching is the Montreal Free School, located in a narrow stone house on a side street of downtown Montreal.

The 23 children who fill its halls with a high level of noise and a clutter of lunch buckets, jigsaw puzzle pieces and stray library books, range in age from four to 12, and are largely sons and daughters of university teachers.

They are there because their parents were unhappy with what they saw as the too-strictly-regimented and uninspired teaching of the public school system.

Vicky Palmer, 32, is a teacher at the school and the mother of three students. She said in an interview that she and her husband, a music teacher at McGill, found the public schools were destructive and made their children "hate learning."

"Most of the parents here didn't like the regimentation children get at a regular school and wanted something freer and more humane, where children could develop at their own rate."

She said most parents were also dissatisfied with the "impoverished curriculum" of public primary schools.

For some, she said, this meant no science is taught in the lower grades or that the French program is poor and taught by Europeans instead of French-speaking Canadians.

For others it meant that art and music are not seen as an important part of the regular curriculum.

"Most of us feel that art in particular is an important part of learning, by teaching the child to express himself freely."

Only two months old, and still searching for the right degree of chaos, the Free School must, to comply with government regulations for private schools, have 60 per cent of its teachers certified and offer a minimum provincial curriculum.

Beyond that, the school's three teachers — two certified and Mrs. Palmer, a high school graduate — are on their own. The children are free to leave the classroom if they aren't interested by the material being taught.

In the classroom, children and teachers talk freely and as equals. The traditional image of the teacher as an authoritarian figure with a monopoly on knowledge is played down.

Call Them by Name

"Damn," says a matter-of-fact small voice in art class, held daily in an upstairs room decorated with crayon drawings and the notice that "My mother goes to acting classes."

"Damn. Bill, I need more clay."

Bill is teacher Bill Heald, 27.

The voice belongs to one of the six or eight — the number varies from minute to minute — children who are making clay tablets to tell a tale of ancient Greece and Mesopotamia. Part of the exercise is to create a hieroglyphic alphabet.

"But I haven't got a penny . . ."

A third child interrupts to ask: "What other animals did the Mesopotamians have besides cattle and horses?" A fourth says: "You know, Bill, this isn't really art, it's history."

Downstairs teacher Barbara Fraser, 22, sits on the floor in the music and geography room reading to two children, amid a collection of hamsters, potted plants, carefully named leaves and goldfish.

Across the hall in the library two children play with a jigsaw puzzle, while two others listen to a third read from a library book. The notice board informs "anybody who wants to come" that there will be a Romeo and Juliet play practice that day.

"We want the children to learn," Mrs. Palmer said. "But we don't so much teach them as help them to work things out and make sure they get the practice which relates it all to life.

"One thing you have to avoid is the idea that everyone is totally free—that you let the kids in the front door and go to it. That doesn't work—they get bored.

"There has to be far more co-operation here than in a regularly scheduled school. As one parent says, it's not chaos we want but anarchy, where everyone has total self-responsibility to himself and to the group."

Ray Affleck, a Montreal architect, says he and his wife are "supremely pleased with the human results" they see in their 12-year-old daughter after a few months in the school.

"We have witnessed a very great change in her. Now she seems to leave for school in the morning with great pleasure and coolly, instead of rushing around with the clock ticking and bells ringing."

Mr. Affleck says his daughter "describes things more — she never used to talk about school at all — and she is beginning to discover things, like how moral things are related to social and historical things."

"The advantages of the school are so far most strongly expressed at the social level, but I would think the advantages will also be good at the academic level.

One hopes that in a freer school children will learn the pleasure of learning and of discipline.

"But I think the learning will be very uneven — a child may study math and ignore art or vice versa — and this, I think, is good.

"The industrial notion that a school can turn out a product equally proficient in math, skiing and poetry now is being superseded in our society by a post-industrial emphasis on pluralism and diversity.

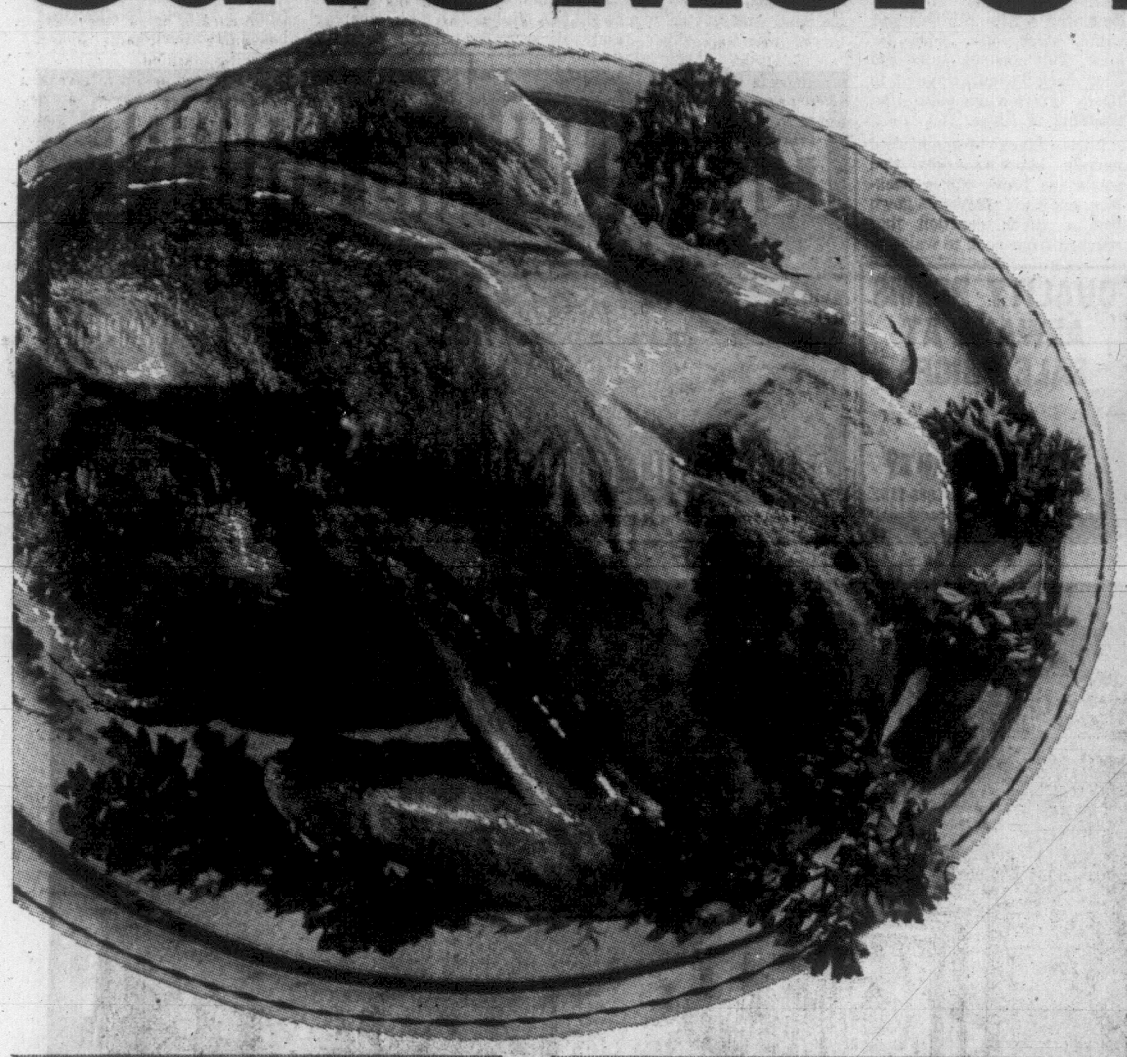

"This phenomenon of a free school is pertinent to the changes we are going through."

'No Creeping Republicanism' In Social Guide

By DAVE McINTOSH

The charge is usually levelled at State Secretary Gerald Pelletier in particular.

For instance, some opposition MPs are upset at present because Mr. Pelletier's department is having a study made of a new system of military decorations to replace the old British awards.

But the social register will be relieved to know that Mr. Pelletier's organization is still publishing the Guide to Relative Precedence at Ottawa.

No creeping republicanism here.

The guide—in blue covers, naturally—sets out the order of precedence for everybody who is anybody in political, judicial diplomatic and religious life.

The guide says it is "intended for use of officials at Ottawa who have to deal with questions of ceremonial."

COST $7,025

The latest annual edition took the time of four persons and cost $7,025, Mr. Pelletier informed Frank Howard, NDP member for Skeena, in a Commons answer.

Above him and other MPs are:

The Governor-General, the prime minister, the chief justice of Canada, former governors-general, former prime ministers, the Senate Speaker, the Commons Speaker, ambassadors, cabinet ministers, the Opposition leader, provincial lieutenant-governors, members of the Privy Council who are not in the cabinet, church leaders, provincial premiers, judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, the president of the Exchequer Court of Canada, the chief justices of the highest provincial courts, judges of the Exchequer Court and of the superior provincial courts and senators.

MLAs LAST

After the MPs come consuls-general of countries without diplomatic recognition, the chief of the defence staff, members of provincial cabinets, Speakers of the legislatures and, lastly, members of the legislatures.

It will be seen that John Diefenbaker as a former prime minister takes precedence over his Conservative party leader, Robert Stanfield, by three places.

Mr. Diefenbaker and Solicitor-General George McIlraith keep their places as the senior men of the Commons.

Both were elected in 1940. NDP Leader T. C. Douglas was elected to the Commons for the first time in 1935 but has not served continuously.

Canada has exchanged ambassadors with the Vatican for the first time. Ambassadors rank above church leaders by no less than five places.

The ambassador of the Vatican thus takes precedence over the primate of the Anglican Church, the moderators of the United and Presbyterian churches, the president of the Baptist federation and, as the guide puts it, "a representative of the Jewish faith."

Aussie Police Claimed Taking Protection Money

By VINCENT MATTHEWS

CANBERRA (CP) — Australians have never been over-fond of their policemen nor treated them with the respect the authorities believe they deserve. Historians trace the disrespect back to the convict ship days when a policeman personified the hated administration.

Policemen down under are having a particularly bad time now. The state government of Victoria has been forced to set up an inquiry into allegations by doctors that senior policemen have been taking bribes totalling hundreds of thousands of dollars. The reason: protection for abortionists.

In Queensland, the government has been holding its own investigation into the reasons for the low morale of the force —and still hasn't been able to come up with any sound or acceptable reasons.

And, giving the plight of the policeman a touch of academic authority, a senior lecturer at a Perth university has published a book claiming that Australian police are trigger-happy and have a virtual "licence to kill."

WANTS LEGAL ABORTIONS

The abortion protection racket was exposed first by Dr. Bertram Wainer who for many months has been fighting a battle with authority to get Victoria's abortion laws reformed. He wants to stamp out what he calls the "backyard operators" by making it legal for doctors to perform abortions in certain cases.

Dr. Wainer himself performed three abortions, announced the fact and challenged the police to arrest him. They didn't. Then he went further and gave the government deputy premier, Sir Arthur Rylah, sworn statements by doctors detailing the bribes they had paid to senior policemen as protection against arrest for carrying out abortions.

One high-level policeman was said to have received $153,000; another a "retainer" of $600 a month.

The government, which has refused to budge despite demands for abortion law reform, tried to hush things up by handing investigations over to the police chief and playing down the allegations.

OUTCRY FORCES INQUIRY

But the public outcry was too great and Rylah was compelled to appoint a leading barrister to head the inquiry.

The barrister, Richard Harding, a senior lecturer in law, probed 12 deaths and said policemen should have stood trial in all cases. None did. He said, too, he was concerned at the way police "went easy" on armed watchmen who shot burglars dead while protecting premises.

Calling for action to give Australian police forces a new image, the influential newspaper Australian commented:

"All our police forces are under-manned, under-equipped, under-trained in relation to the rapid social changes around them, and over-worked."

De Wolf Says Universities Must Change

VANCOUVER (CP) — Universities should become more democratic by electing their governing bodies, British Columbia Progressive Conservative leader John de Wolf said Tuesday.

Addressing a debate on universities at Simon Fraser University in suburban Burnaby, he said university boards of governors should all include student and faculty members.

Senates, or academic governing bodies, should also include members of the public, he said.

Faculty members also should not be given tenure, or guaranteed permanence on the faculty, because this gives "too much security and too little incentive to do their best."

Instead professors should be given contracts according to whether they are at junior, intermediate or senior level.

Mr. de Wolf also suggested curtailing enrolment at the University of B.C. and starting a University of Vancouver, along with new universities at Vernon and Prince George.

He also suggested that student grants be paid to Notre Dame University in Nelson, a private university, and to any new private universities in the province.

Horses Not Sold

BURNABY (CP)—A government spokesman said Monday 14 prize-winning Clydesdale horses at Oakalla Prison Farm here have not been sold yet. A petition is being circulated in the Fraser Valley to ask the government to keep at least one of the prize teams.

Suburban-Type Living Downtown Planned by Edmonton Firm

Apartment units will sell in a $29,000-$43,500 range and will cater to those who like living in apartments, but don't like the bustle of downtown living.

The 16-storey building will be equipped with recreation facilities found in country clubs.

Irving Kipnes, one of the developers of the $3,500,000 project, said there will be 95 units for sale in the building just 15 blocks from the city centre. One of the advantages of the location is that it is close to professional buildings, and businessmen can walk to work.

The exterior will be landscaped with waterfalls, trees, fountains, pools and, of course, grass.

FACILITIES GALORE

Also outside will be a wading pool, skating rink, barbecue shelter, volleyball lawns and traffic-free walkways.

Inside will be a health room, games room and a party room.

The health room will contain whirlpool baths, swimming pools, sauna baths and an exercise room.

In the games room there will be card tables, pool tables, shuffleboard courts and a table-tennis table.

The party room will have a dance floor, stage, a large bar and an ice machine.

Each unit in the building will have a large balcony and all major appliances while living area will vary from 1,100 square feet to 1,700 square feet.

Besides the normal homes, there will be two penthouses for sale. The price tag for those will be about $100,000 apiece.

"We feel the market will be for professional people with families or whose families have grown up," said Mr. Kipnes.

'Ban Tankers From North'

American oil tankers should be banned from Canadian Arctic waters now, because not enough is known about northern waters, David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Tuesday to a meeting of the Victoria branch of the World Federalists.

Not enough is known about Arctic waters, ice conditions, and whether ships are strong enough to ply the northern seas.

The Manhattan, an oil tanker used last summer to test the possibility of using a northwest passage for oil transport, had to pass through Canadian waters, but the question of Arctic sovereignty is still a matter for discussion between the U.S. and Canada.

PUBLIC PRESSURE

There has been mounting public pressure for the government to assert sovereignty over Arctic waters since the Manhattan sailed the passage. Thus far the U.S. has not recognized any claims.

Anderson, outlining the problem of determining international jurisdictions over the sea bed, said we now stand "at the beginning of the real exploitation of perhaps half of the earth's surface."

"The world's largest era of colonization is ahead of us." However, the richest nations will be capable of taking the best and largest portions of the sea bed for themselves, thus perpetuating their wealth and power. The less advanced nations will be left with little.

But he said the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. realize what a colonial race would do and that there must be control. They, through the United Nations, are now trying to determine what kind of international control is feasible.

PEACEFUL USE

The rich-poor problem is complicated by the fact that countries with longer coastlines than others feel as though they should have greater portions of the sea bed, Anderson stated.

Canada is in a position to put across the idea of international control, he argued, and should insist that the sea bed be used for peaceful purposes.

Anderson has been promoting lately a private member's bill to have the pollution of interprovincial waterways a criminal offence.

"It may get to second reading," he said.

'BEST POSSIBLE MAN NEEDED BY CHURCH'

The choice of a bishop should be an exercise in selecting the best possible man for the position, says Rev. H. Gordon Walker, rector of St. David's Anglican Church, Cordova Bay.

"It should be a choice, not a contest, and such a choice demands full information."

Walker spoke in reference to the election of a new Bishop of the Vancouver Island diocese of British Columbia, to be held in Christ Church Cathedral Friday, Feb. 6.

"At the last election," he said, "knowledge about the less prominent candidates was sadly lacking. One lay delegate admitted to voting for the candidate with the shortest name.

Walker said the Anglican Church canon (law) governing the election of a bishop makes it mandatory for "all available information" to be submitted with nominations.

"Every person nominated has a right—perhaps even a duty—to inform the voting delegates of his qualifications and his plans if elected.

"The presently accepted system places a premium on local candidature, since out-of-town candidates are denied the word-of-mouth publicity available to those on the spot."

•

The minister said he is willing to help any or all candidates to place their qualifications before the delegates.

The executive committee of the Anglican Synod of Vancouver Island will meet in Christ Church Cathedral Thursday to consider nominations.

The vacancy has been created by the sudden death last December of Bishop John Ogle Anderson, 57, only a few months after he took office.

Among the expected nominations are Dean Brian Whitlow, DD, of Christ Church Cathedral, administrator of the diocese until a new bishop is elected; Archdeacon Hywel Jones, rector of St. Mary's Oak Bay; Canon Charles Bishop of St. George's, Cadboro Bay; Canon Hilary Butler, canon lecturer to the diocese; Canon Brian Page, rector of St. Barnabas, and Rev. Walker of Cordova Bay.

Phil Claims Solution To Welfare

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi said Monday he has a plan to cure British Columbia of its welfare problems.

"By the time I get through there will be no problems at all," Gaglardi told reporters on his way into cabinet.

He couldn't reveal any details of the plan but said it would "restore dignity" to welfare recipients through a complete reorganization of the approach to welfare.

"Soon there will be no such thing as being on welfare as such, on that kind of basis," he said, referring to the change in emphasis from welfare to rehabilitation which was announced when Gaglardi took over the portfolio last year.

"The emphasis will be on making everybody a useful citizen," he said "I want to treat human beings on a proper basis but the important thing is to have them have some dignity about them. We want people to have an area of importance about them."

'HUMAN ERA'

"The 70s is a human era," Gaglardi said.

Members of the Victoria Low Income Group, in the buildings to meet with NDP leader Dave Barrett to press their fight for removal of Gaglardi as welfare minister, said they hoped Gaglardi's plan would answer their complaints.

"This will be a welcome change," said Mrs. Walter Olszewski when told of Gaglardi's announcement. "He's talked a lot about solving the problems. . . ."

Mrs. Olszewski said Barrett gave the five-member Low Income Group delegation a "very sympathetic" hearing.

A number of specific topics were dealt with at the meeting, she said, including the group's fight for improved day-care assistance for working mothers, relief for low-income homeowners who can't pay rising property taxes and better treatment of welfare recipients requiring prescription drugs.

Mrs. Olzsewski said representatives of the political parties will be invited to attend monthly meetings of the group. No decision has been made yet on whether to hold demonstrations at the buildings during the session, she said.

GAMBLER TACKLES AUTO POLLUTION

Can the man who built the world's most successful business jet when everyone said he couldn't, do it again? Bill Lear is now trying to develop a smog-free automobile engine. It may be a steam engine or a gas turbine. So far Lear has gambled more than $10 million trying to solve North America's worst pollution problem. In Weekend Magazine, Philip Smith tells how Lear won't give up trying to make us breathe easier—and how close he is to the solution.

CANADA'S MOST POLLUTED CITY

Montreal lies under a cloud. It's colored yellow, composed mostly of carbon monoxide and damages sight, hearing and brain cells. Cars are mainly the culprits but so are weak or non-existent laws. In the U.S. legislation is fighting the problem. But in Canada there are still no national clean air standards. Heward Graffety tells Weekend Magazine readers what should be done in this country.

Also these features in Weekend Magazine:

Fish Farming on the Prairies

Wheat brings $20 an acre — but trout may bring in $50. That's the hope behind the experimental trout farming in the pothole-ponds of Manitoba. James Quig went on the first fish harvest for Weekend Magazine and describes what this venture could mean to the wheat farmers.

Nessie Where Are You?

Cameras are waiting, two submarines have searched and sonar equipment operates night and day. Yet still no definite sign of Scotland's Loch Ness monster. Among those waiting is a young Canadian songwriter who needs Nessie's inspiration to finish his music. In Weekend Magazine Mike Cowley describes the slightly unreal world built around the Loch Ness legend.

Different Kinds of Begonias

By HILDA BEASTALL

Two kinds of begonias are popular here for outdoor bedding and planters in summer. Their requirements are as different from each other as their habits of growth — yet both kinds can be started now from seeds.

Hilda

When gardeners buy the plants in spring already beginning to flower, they often do not enquire anything about them, believing that only one kind of begonia exists.

This is far from the truth. There are in fact, dozens of species, some native to South Africa, others to South America, of which our summer blooming plants are developments.

The begonias with small leaves, dark bronze or green, and clusters of small flowers of pink, white or red, about a half inch in diameter, are Begonia semperflorens (Latin for always flowering). They have fibrous roots.

Tuberous begonias have a different set of parents, which give them a thick, solid rootstock, huge blooms, and large leaves.

Seeds of these two summer favorites can be sown indoors now to give them time to reach flowering stage this year.

Don't try this unless you can give steady warm conditions and good overhead light all the way through from seed sowing until outdoor temperatures are up in June for planting out.

Begonia seed is the finest we have handled; much finer than petunia or lobelia. Hold your breath when the packet is opened. One cough will blow away five dollars, never to be found.

The soil mixture on which to sow this dust-fine seed must itself be extremely fine. Rub through a quarter-inch screen some leafmould, peatmoss and well rotted compost and fill the pot to within a quarter inch of the top. Stand the pot in water to its rim until the soil mixture begins to darken.

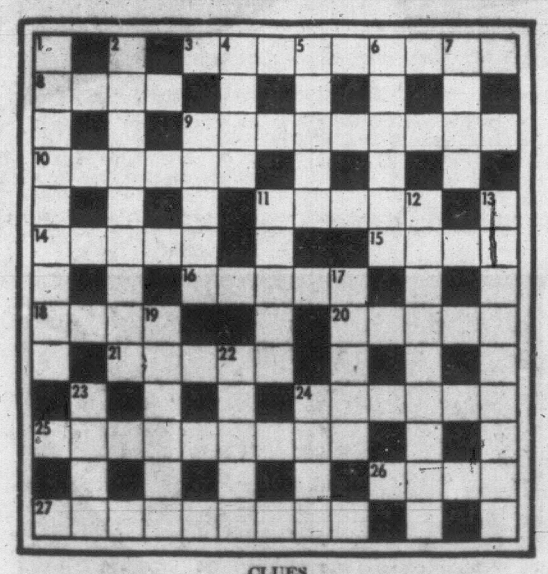

Remove from the water, and stand to drain. Then sow the seeds, carefully tapping them out over the whole surface to avoid any thick patches of seedlings.

Do not cover with soil. Insert a wooden label with name of seed and date of sowing, and cover pot with small piece of glass, in turn covered with a sheet of paper.

Keep the pot in a temperature over 70 deg. F. until germination begins. This will first appear as tiny green spots, barely visible to the naked eye.

Daylight will be needed at this stage, but beware of drying out. Water only by standing the pot in a pan of water. The glass cover may remain on the pot while the tiny seedlings are developing, and it will be three to four weeks after germination before they are large enough to prick out into a flat of soil.

YOUR HEALTH

Dreaded Disease Helped by Drug

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Every so often, as I walk along the street, I notice a man of 50 or so ahead of me, and immediately, I recognize that he has Parkinson's disease. Why? Because he is walking with a curious sort of running, stumbling step, and he is bent over forward. As I catch up with him, I see that his face has no expression, the so-called mask face, or "poker face," and when I look down at his hands I see that on one side his thumb and first two fingers are opening and shutting rhythmically in a curious, so-called "pill-rolling" way.

At the beginning of this century the disease was called "the shaking palsy," or paralysis agitans, but later it came to be called Parkinson's disease, because in 1817, it was perfectly described by James Parkinson, an able British physician. I saw very few cases of it until around 1919, shortly after the close of the First World War, when it seemed to follow an epidemic of Von Economo's encephalitis (inflammation of the brain, or "brain fever"). Fortunately, the disease is rarely associated with anything like a brain tumor.

In people around 40, I have seen the disease follow an attack of brain fever, but often it seemed to "come out of the blue." In 62 per cent of cases, we physicians do not know the cause. In older people, around 65, I have often seen it follow a little stroke, due probably to hardening of an artery in the brain. Occasionally today a person will develop a Parkinsonian type of tremor after taking some drug that works on the brain.

Fortunately, the injury that causes the trouble comes usually near the base of the brain or in the brain-stem, which runs down to join the spinal cord. That leaves the upper, thinking part of the brain untouched, and people with Parkinson's disease usually remain competent and sane.

I can never foregt the time around 1915, when some people were suing their wealthy uncle for leaving all his money to a charity and none to them. They said that because he had a shaking palsy, he was not mentally competent to make a will. I was called to the witness stand and testified that I had spent days in a big medical library reading everything I could find on such a palsy, and in every book and article, I read that a shaking palsy does not affect the mind. And so the uncle's will was left unchanged.

★ ★ ★

Fortunately, Parkinson's disease is rarely associated with a brain tumor. The disease is not catching, but it has a six per cent chance of running in a family.

★ ★ ★

Many years ago Dr. Irving S. Cooper of St. Barnabas Hospital in New York City, while operating on the base of the brain of a man with Parkinson's disease, accidentally cut a little artery. As he tied it, he noticed that the man's hand tremor stopped and it did not come back.

The doctor was so impressed by this that he promptly started on years of research that led him to the discovery that if he destroyed a tiny bit of the lower part of the brain, near where he had tied the little artery (he destroys it now by freezing it), he can bring immediate and remarkable relief to many patients. He has since operated on many thousands of Parkinsonians and relieved them of their tremor. He does not operate on old people who have mentally degenerated or are rapidly growing worse.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Problems Delayed B.C.-Canada Union

By BOB BOWMAN

Monday's story described some of the difficulties that arose after the Charlottetown and Quebec conferences in 1864 and nearly prevented Confederation. However, when Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were united in 1867 the far-away colony of British Columbia began to show some interest. The mainland and Vancouver Island had been united in 1866, and the west coast was no longer the exclusive preserve of fur-traders. Gold had been discovered and the population was growing. So in 1867 British Columbia asked London if it could join Canada.

The British government would not agree because it did not see how Ottawa could govern the west coast when Canada did not own the territory between Ontario and the Rockies. This difficulty was solved in 1870, and on Jan. 21, 1871, the British Columbia legislature agreed to terms for joining Canada that had deen worked out in Ottawa. British Columbia became part of Canada officially on July 20, 1871.

There was some interesting background to the union that was not apparent to most people at the time. The U.S. had bought Alaska from Russia and a logical next step would have been to acquire the entire Pacific coast. British and U.S. relations were strained owing to incidents in the American Civil War. The Russians were advancing along the Amur River in China, and the power of Prussia was growing in Europe. So Britain was glad to have Canada assume responsibility for British Columbia.

The difficulty was to get the people of British Columbia to accept the idea. Some of them did not want to give up their direct connection with Britain. Others were interested in joining the U.S. and actually Grant in Washington.
sent a petition to President

Canada had to come up with a generous arrangement to bring British Columbia into Confederation and promised to build a railway to the Pacific Coast within 10 years. Per capita payments were also made to the new province, only the population was estimated to be double its actual size!

Other events on Jan. 21:

1766 — Jean Olivier Briand

1796 — General Robert became the first Bishop of Quebec since 1760. Prescott was made lieutenant-governor of Lower Canada.

1900 — Canadian troops sailed from Halifax for South African war.

When Ann was half as old as Joe was when Ann was twice as old as Joe was when Ann was half as old as she is now, Ann was three times as old as Joe was one year before he was a third as old as Ann was.

Ann is a teen-ager and we have taken ages in complete years.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Back in the early 1930s, one of the nation's better bridge players was Clinton P. Anderson, currently the senator from New Mexico, and formerly the Secretary of Agriculture under President Truman. Among his bridge accomplishments is the winning of the United States Bridge Association's Open Team-of-Four Championship in 1933.

In the deal presented today, which arose in a rubber-bridge game a few decades ago, Sen. Anderson came up with a simple defensive play that most players would have overlooked. In making it, he talked declarer out of fulfilling the contract.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ K Q 7 3
♡ 6 4
◇ A Q J 10

WEST
♠ 9 6 2
♡ K Q 10 8 2
◇ K 6
♣ 8 7 4

EAST
♠ 5
♡ A 9 5 3
◇ 8 7 4 2

SOUTH
♠ A J 10 8 4
♡ J 7
◇ 9 5 3
♣ 6 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

Anderson, sitting West, opened the king of hearts, which won the trick. He then continued with the heart queen, and captured the second trick. To trick three, he led the six of diamonds, away from his king.

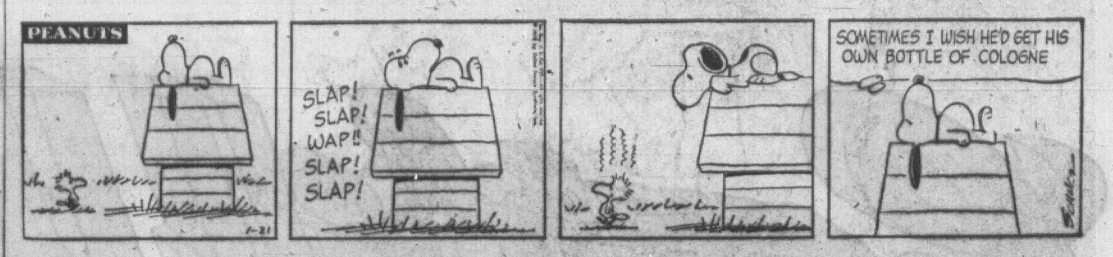

Exactly what went through declarer's mind at this point, I do not know for sure. But, in all probability, he had a hunch, or a premonition, that the diamond six was a singleton; and that if he took the finesse, East would win the trick with the king, after which he would return a diamond for West to ruff, for the setting trick.

And so, at trick three, declarer put up the board's ace of diamonds. He then cashed the king of spades, the jack of spades, and the 10 of spades, gathering in the adverse trumps. He next led a club, finessing the jack. As is evident, East's king won the trick. Eventually, Anderson's king of diamonds took the setting trick.

That declarer made a bad play when he declined to take the diamond finesse is rather obvious. But this should not be permitted to detract from Anderson's fine play.

From West's position, he perceived that his diamond king was hopelessly trapped by dummy's holding in that suit. He also realized that later on declarer would surely finesse, and bring home four diamond tricks. His only hope was to "scare" declarer out of taking the finesse while trumps were still outstanding. He sure succeeded.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH is offered at two different times tonight. Enter Laughing, a 1967 production, may be seen at 8, Channel 8, or at midnight, Channel 6. It's a comedy about a star-struck Bronx boy (Rene Santoni) and his first taste of acting. Carl Reiner directed and co-scripted the film which also stars Jose Ferrer, Shelley Winters, Elaine May and Jack Gilford.

★ ★ ★

REDDICK II, at 9, Channels 2 and 6, is a drama special, a sequel to last season's highly-acclaimed drama. Conflict springs from an outburst of violence in a church sanctuary involving hippies. Rev. Jim Reddick tries to explain their actions to the congregation but they demand his resignation and want to padlock out the youngsters.

★ ★ ★

NANNY AND THE PROFESSOR. 7:30, Channel 4. If Mary Poppins were to pop in on an unsuspecting household in 1970, she'd probably act quite a bit like the nanny in this series. Juliet Mills is very charming as the British governess who mysteriously arrives at the home of widowed Professor Everett (Richard Long) and his three motherless children plus dog; and immediately takes over. The success of the series will depend upon Miss Mills, and judging from the opener, she seems equipped to carry it off.

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9, Channels 7, 12. Fans see another side of hero Doc Gannon tonight when he puts up a runaway kid in his apartment. Gannon displays sympathy listening to the youngster's complaints, while hunting for an answer to the blackouts suffered by the kid. This episode uses the tumor plot coupled with the rebellious youth angle, and Chad Everett demonstrates his allegiance to the new generation.

JOHNNY CASH SHOW. 9, Channel 4. Fans, your country singing idol Johnny Cash returns tonight for a weekly round of melodious tunes, sung with the heartiness and gusto you relish. In addition to his own concert segment featuring such Cash favorites as "Sing a Travelling Song" and "Keep on the Sunny Side," Johnny is host to a trio of talented guests—Arlo Guthrie, Bobbie Gentry and Jose Feliciano—introducing each of them for a solo, and joining each one in a duet.

★ ★ ★

MUSIC HALL. 9, Channel 5. "The Friars Club 'Roasts' Jack Benny." Tune in and stay with it to the end. Though this "roasting" tribute to Jack Benny is not all of a piece, some of it is positively hilarious, particularly when Milton Berle is on the rostrum, batting away not only at Benny but practically annihilating his old pal Ed Sullivan. In fact, Sullivan is the butt of so much "roasting," he really has a job to fill when he comes up to bat himself. Other high spots include Johnny Carson's superb "cool" as the evening's "roastmaster," Vice-President Agnew's opening testimonials and jibes, and Jack Benny's closing licks, of course.

★ ★ ★

ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK SHOW. 7:30, Channel 8; 10, Channel 4. Pop singer Engelbert Humperdinck, who seems to have bridged the generation gap by winning over both teen-agers and their mothers, begins his own weekly variety hour tonight. For the stylish opener, Engel has lovely Leslie Uggams, crooner Tony Bennett and hoofer-comic Donald O'Connor on the bill.

★ ★ ★

HAWAII FIVE-O. 10, Channels 7, 12. Pretty fair kidnapping story with a different twist. Following several kidnapping cases, agent McGarrett discovers that the culprit is a Vietnam veteran with severe psychiatric problems, badly in need of medical help. Newcomer Jeff Pomerantz plays the kidnapper with a flair and should be heard from in the future.

THE DANGEROUS and thrilling sport of sky-diving is growing more popular every day, and all aspects of this new sport will be examined on a special one-hour CBC documentary tonight at 8 p.m.

IRISH COFFEE. 10:30, Channel 2: The hazards and delights of broadcasting are aired by disc jockeys Peter Griffin, Bill McVean and Jay Nelson, announcer-reporter Al Boliska and sportscaster Mike Magee. Farry Ferrier is host.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

8:00: Channel 8: Enter Laughing (1967 Comedy) Jose Ferrer, Shelly Winters, Elaine May.

11:40: Channel 2: Stranger on the Third Floor (1940 Mystery), Peter Lorre, John McGuire, Margaret Tallichet.

12:00: Channel 6: Enter Laughing (1967 comedy), Jose Ferrer, Shelley Winters, Elaine May.

90 PETS AND SUPPLIES

SIBERIAN HUSKY PUPPIES — Interested in something more than a pet? Like a good friend who considers himself at least an equal, a dog that is gentle, loves children, doesn't bark (but occasionally sings), doesn't smell (and sheds dirt), a handsome excuse for a healthy walk?
Registered pure-bred puppies 10 weeks old, from champion parents. Only two females left. $125 and $150. Phone 658-5010.

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY, $2,000 DOWN
If you can qualify as a good cook, hard worker, of good character, I will put you into this restaurant business with very little money. This business has been a landmark for years. The Millstream Restaurant. Turn on the heat, clean up, open the doors, and get going. Hard, hard work, but with the lease goes the option to purchase the whole 3 acres, commercial land with river frontage, highway frontage and buildings that would cost $50,000 to replace. The land alone is worth $25,000, there is a 4 bedroom home on the property, plus another building with a 2 bedroom apartment to be completed by me. Ideal 2 family operation in fast growing area, at intersection of 2 main highways. Phone 477-6623.

Brothers 'Bruised,' Not Wounded in Uvic Session

BROTHERS

By DON VIPOND

Education Minister Donald Brothers stepped into the young lions' den at the University of Victoria Tuesday and emerged 90 minutes later verbally bruised but not mortally wounded.

In fact he drew a grudging tribute from one student who said he didn't make a habit of complimenting Socreds but thought the education minister had stood up rather well.

It was one of those noon-hour sessions where people of note give a brief talk and then are targets for questions.

While Brothers stood alone in a lecture auditorium, about 200 students, gathered like Romans at the arena, poured questions, admonitions and sometimes just plain insults down upon him.

He answered some of the questions, sometimes with a few of his own, dodged others and occasionally changed the subject.

Future teachers appeared to dominate the crowd and their biggest concern was whether there will be jobs for them. One student claimed only a third of the teachers being hired in B.C. were trained in the province. Brothers said he was surprised to hear that.

Another said the provincial government's financial squeeze in education has produced this paradox: the better a teacher's qualifications, the less chance he or she has of being hired because a school board can't afford the higher salaries.

B.C. spent $325 million in education last year, said the minister. It was the major item in the provincial budget. Answering those who pointed to the billion-dollar power development program, he said the government launched it to attract industry so graduating students would have jobs.

Brothers' continual reference to 1952 statistics (when the Socreds came to power) and today's spending irked the audience. Laughter drowned him out when he said the government had first concentrated on providing transportation and power and had now turned to education.

He was hammered on the matter of crowded schools but said he wasn't convinced they were that crowded. Why is it, he said, public school design provides 50 square feet per pupil and yet universities wanted 200 square feet for each student.

Along the way, he spoke out in favor of school board and university autonomy and said he thought universities would be the losers if one super-board was put in control of them.

"You may feel some of us are hot under the collar," one student told him at one point. "We are. You should be on campus like this two or three times a year. We get the feeling you don't care."

On equalizations grants (money to help out-of-town students attend university) Brothers said such aid was unlikely. Instead, the government is taking higher education to the students of the interior with its regional college program.

Education innovation is extremely expensive and experts claim it takes six or seven years to determine whether a change was a good one, he said.

He pointed to the updating of a high school science program to illustrate. Everyone agreed the course needed improving but no one realized that the changes required lab modifications in the schools which ultimately cost about $30 million.

Several in the audience asked him what had happened to the Perry report on universities which he received last spring. He said he had not had sufficient opportunity to study it yet but promised it would be released unabridged. He wouldn't say when.

Youth Committed

INVERMETE (CP) — William Pascal, 20, was committed for trial after a preliminary hearing in this eastern British Columbia community Tuesday for the non-capital murder of his brother, Williard, last November.

Early Troubles Brushed Aside As Bennett Opens Eric Martin

Eleven months after its completion the Eric Martin Institute of Psychiatry was officially opened Tuesday by Premier Bennett.

There was no mention of the wrangling which had stalled the transfer of the institute from the provincial government to the Royal Jubilee Hospital until September.

There was no talk of the federal government's refusal to participate in the financing of 50 beds, reducing the numbers available to 120.

In his last official function as chairman of the hospital's board, Mayor J. Courtney Haddock introduced the premier and told the standing guests that a royal warrant had been received from London, allowing the prefix "Royal" to be used in connection with the institute as part of the hospital complex.

Praising former health minister Eric Martin, after whom the $7,000,000 institute is named, Bennett described him as:

"A man who grew with the times — and beyond."

The premier said that the normal financing pattern was that the government pay 60 per cent of the costs, and the city, 40 per cent.

He pointed out the city is saving money because the government is paying the whole bill and the institute is for the use of all Vancouver Islanders.

He did not mention the federal government's contribution toward the 120 beds.

No mention was made, eigher, of the $53,000 given by the Capital Region District Board last August in the Jubilee's working capital fund to help get the project launched.

A faulty public address system made it impossible for all the premier's speech to be heard.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark quipped:

"Build a better PA system and every public speaker will beat a path to your door!"

Loffmark urged women's groups to do their part in the program by assisting mental patients to rehabilitate themselves in the community.

In an unscheduled speech, Martin said the government had originally wanted to build a pavilion, or a series of smaller centres, rather than the institute.

He said the decision to build the six-storey facility was made because there weren't enough psychiatrists to service a number of centres.

"They don't practise where there are very few people."

The premier said "This institute has already taken on a more human touch." after Mrs. Martin unveiled an oil painting of her husband, painted by local artist Elizabeth Goward in 1968.

The premier unveiled a plaque which said the institute is a gift to Vancouver Island from the government.

Lieutenant-Governor

(L.S.)

CANADA

PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

ELIZABETH the SECOND, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom, Canada and Her other Realms and Territories, Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.

To all to whom these presents shall come—

GREETING.

"DAN CAMPBELL"
Minister of Municipal Affairs.

WHEREAS by section 131 (1) of the Municipalities Enabling and Validating Act it is provided that where a Regional Planning Board was established under section 720 of the "Municipal Act", the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, by supplementary Letters Patent, declare the provisions of sections 795 to 798D of the "Municipal Act" to apply to the regional districts within the regional planning area, and the provisions of subsections (3) and (4) of section 786 of the "Municipal Act" do not apply:

AND WHEREAS the Capital Region Planning Board of British Columbia lies within the Capital Regional District:

NOW KNOW YE THAT by these presents we do order and proclaim that on, from, and after the first day of January, 1970, the following be added to the objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations and conditions of the Capital Regional District:

DIVISION VIII—PLANNING

1. Subject to these Letters Patent, the provisions of sections 795 to 798D inclusive, of the "Municipal Act" apply to the regional district.

2. All member municipalities participate in the function of the regional district under this division.

3. In addition to the powers granted under paragraph 1, the regional district may undertake planning services on a contract basis for any municipality or other public authority within the regional district upon such terms and conditions as are mutually agreed upon, provided that the entire cost of such planning service shall be apportioned to the municipality concerned, and provided further that the Regional Board shall be responsible for providing staff to carry out such contract and which staff shall report directly to the municipality or other public authority concerned.

4. Notwithstanding any provisions of the "Municipal Act", when the Regional Board is exercising the powers conferred by sections 798A, 798C (1), and 798D of the "Municipal Act", each Director has only one vote and an affirmative vote of at least two-thirds of:

(a) all the electoral area Directors; and

(b) all the Directors

is required to adopt a by-law pursuant to those sections.

5. The annual net cost incurred by the regional district pursuant to section 798A, subsection (1) of section 798C, and under section 798D of the "Municipal Act", less any revenue derived from permit fees shall be apportioned among the electoral areas on the basis referred to in section 782 of the "Municipal Act".

6. The annual net cost incurred by the Regional Board pursuant to this division, less costs recovered pursuant to paragraphs 3 and 5, shall be apportioned among the member municipalities on the basis of assessment as fixed for school purposes in the current year, excluding property that is taxable for school purposes only by special Act, in the electoral areas and for general municipal purposes in the municipalities.

7. Before an official regional plan is adopted or amended it shall be referred to the municipal Councils of the municipalities within the regional district.

8. In the event of any disagreement between a member municipality and an official of the regional district on the administration or the interpretation of an official regional plan, the Council of the member municipality, in the case of a municipality, or the director representing the electoral area, in the case of an electoral area, may appeal to the Regional Board, and in the event of the Council or the Director being aggrieved by the decision of the Board, the matter may be further appealed as described in section 798E of the "Municipal Act".

9. (1). The Technical Planning Committee established under section 798B of the "Municipal Act" shall consist of:

(a) the Planning Director of the regional district who shall be the Chairman;

(b) the Medical Health Officer having jurisdiction within the regional district;

(c) not more than one employee appointed by each municipality within the regional district;

(d) the Director of the Regional Planning Division of the Department of Municipal Affairs;

(e) a representative of the Department of Highways;

(f) such other representatives of public agencies as the Regional Board may direct.

9. (2). In addition, the Technical Planning Committee may from time to time call in representatives of public agencies as non-voting members of the Committee.

10. The Regional District shall assume all the assets, rights, liabilities and obligations of the Capital Region Planning Board on and from the 1st day of January, 1970.

11. No debt other than temporary current borrowing shall be incurred by the regional district for the purpose of this function.

12. Without limiting the generality of paragraph 10, employees of the Capital Region Planning Board shall for the purpose of determining length of service, for vacation and sick leave entitlement, be deemed to have been employed by the regional district from the date that their continuous employment by the Planning Board commenced.

13. On and after the 1st day of April, 1970, the provisions of B.C. Regulation No. 103/60, B.C. Regulation No. 147/66, B.C. Regulation No. 262/66, B.C. Regulation No. 20/67, and B.C. Regulation No. 67/68, as amended to that date, remain in force and effect in the areas established as Community Planning Areas 3 and 4, as if they were by-laws adopted by the Regional Board pursuant to sections 798A or 798D of the "Municipal Act", until such provisions are amended or repealed by by-law in accordance with the provisions of the said Act.

14. On and after the 1st day of April, 1970, the provisions of B.C. Regulation No. 274/69 as amended to that date remain in force and effect in that part of the area established as Community Planning Area 24 lying within the Regional District, as if it were a by-law adopted by the Regional Board pursuant to section 798A of the "Municipal Act", until such provisions are amended or repealed by by-law in accordance with the provisions of the said Act.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed:

WITNESS, Colonel the Honourable John R. Nicholson, P.C., O.B.E., Q.C., LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of Our said Province of British Columbia, in Our City of Victoria, in Our said Province, this thirtieth day of December in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and sixty-nine, and in the eighteenth year of Our Reign.

By Command.

"W. D. BLACK"
Provincial Secretary.

Health Facility 'Now Obsolete'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The psychiatric division chairman of the British Columbia Medical Association said Tuesday the Eric Martin Institute is obsolete.

Dr. Conrad Shwarz, in a statement released here, said no one involved in the development of the $7,000,000, 170-bed hospital "can take unqualified pride in the achievement."

"The provincial government erected the building as a provincial mental health facility on a plan that is now obsolete, did not consult adequately with professionals on the field of psychiatry and ermained rigid in the face of criticism of design and structure raised over a number of years," he said.

"The (psychiatry) section feels that the public money expended on the institute would have given much greater returns in terms of psychiatric care if modern concepts of treatment had been given serious consideration," Dr. Shwarz said.

Warrants For $17.2 M Approved

A total of $17.2 million special warrants to cover overspending by provincial government departments and agencies was approved today by the cabinet.

B.C. Ferries received an extra $5 million over the $23 million approved by the legislature last year for the 1969-70 fiscal year.

An extra $8 million was voted for "roads, bridges, ferries capital construction" to bring the year's total to $80 million.

The Provincial Alliance of Businessmen, set up under Phil Gaglardi last summer, received an extra $40,000 to bring its total of operating monies to $140,000 for the year.

Trade promotion in connection with B.C. participation in Osaka 70 received $450,000 over the $500,000 originally approved.

The B.C. Medical Services Plan, estimated at $50 million, received an extra $2 million.

The cabinet orders approving the expenditures said they were unforeseen and in the public interest.

Fifth Alderman

Five Saanich aldermen supported final reading of the duplex bylaw Monday night, which failed to get the necessary six votes for passage.

In its report Monday, The Times identified only four of the aldermen because of a printing error. The fifth alderman was William Noel

Alfred Scow To Head Review Board

Alfred J. Scow has been appointed chairman of the second board of review for the Workmen's Compensation Board of British Columbia.

The appointment was announced today by Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

"The appointment of a second board of review was decided when it became apparent that appeals by claimants should be expedited more quickly," Peterson said.

As chairman of the board, Scow brings to the position his experience as a lawyer for the city of New Westminster and with the Amerindian Lands Commission in Guyana.

Scow, the first British Columbia Indian to be admitted to the bar, returned to B.C. in 1969 following his work in Guyana.

When the claims department of the workmen's compensation board intially rejects a claim, the claimant is referred to the board of review.

Integration Failure Explained

Indians have not been asked to participate in the formation of educational policies, Chief Philip Paul told members of the Willows Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday.

This was one of the reasons for the failure to incorporate Indian children into the provincial system on the Saanich Peninsula, he said.

He pointed out that in 20 years, only about six children have completed the course of elementary and secondary training.

"Among the policymakers have to be Indian people — and threre are plenty of them available," he said. "They are capable of understanding some of the problems these students face."

SHORTER PARADE, VICTORIA DAY AIM

The annual Victoria Day parade will be shortened.

"We shall tighten it up all along the line," a spokesman for Greater Victoria Celebrations Committee said today.

The committee has decided the parade is too long and has too many performing bands.

There were 34 bands in the parade last May 24 and it took two hours and 50 minutes to pass a given point. Some of the participants had to wait at the assembly station in Mayfair Shopping Centre for three hours before they could get into motion.

"It has been suggested that the number of bands be limited to 20," said John Rafter, who was re-elected chairman of the committee for 1970, at a meeting Tuesday night "but this poses difficulties.

"Some of the bands, most of them from Washington state, have been coming here for years. It is a big event for them and we don't want to hurt any feelings."

Frank Hunter, who revived the Victoria Day parade 28 years ago, opposed the idea of limiting the number of participating bands.

He said the parade had developed into one of the city's biggest civic celebrations. It attracted close to 1,000 young bandsmen and women to the city every year and they showed considerable enthusiasm and skill.

"It is unthinkable that we should tell them to stay away," Hunter said.

The committee decided to send letters to the participating groups recommending that the whole parade be shortened and carried out with more dispatch.

Abortion Plea Echoed Across Nation

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Need for more realistic legislation on abortion as presented through the one-woman campaign of Victoria's Mrs. Elizabeth Murison, is echoed all across Canada.

Forbes

You may remember that a Gallup poll, taken in April, 1969, took for granted that an abortion to save a mother's life was legal and it went on to ask the question:

● It has been suggested that abortion be legalized as well, to preserve a mother's physical or mental health. Would you approve or disapprove of such a step?

Seventy-three per cent approved. In answer to the same question in 1965, 71 per cent approved.

The poll was taken at a time when debate in the Commons and later in the Sentate centred around the Criminal Law Amendment Bill C-150, which included the section on abortion.

During debate in the Senate at second reading of the bill, Senator Muriel Fergusson of New Brunswick gave it as her opinion that legislation should provide much broader grounds for permitting abortion than the danger to the life or physical or mental health of the woman involved.

She also had reservations about the provision in the amendment which required a certificate in writing from a therapeutic abortion committee, showing that continuation of a pregnancy would endanger life and health "because in case of an emergency it might be difficult to get a number of doctors together to secure such a certificate promptly."

★ ★ ★

The decision, she said, should be that of the woman herself and her physician.

The senator, who has fought on many occasions for women's rights, said she hoped that therapeutic abortion committees, if named, would bear in mind the definition of health given by the World Health Organization in 1960:

● Health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well being, and not simply the absence of illness or disease.

She also reminded her colleagues that evidence given before the House by the committee which studied Bill C-150, made it clear that abortions do take place in some hospitals.

But "it is only those who can afford to pay high prices who are able to secure these abortions and many of them are not the women who need them most."

Result is that the woman who already has a larger family than she can look after, feed and clothe, on finding herself pregnant becomes desperate but cannot terminate the pregnancy unless she tries to do it herself or goes to an unqualified person who will undertake to procure an abortion. But these efforts, through ingnorance, lack of care or the use of unsanitary instruments very often brings about illness, disease and sometimes death.

Contrary to popular belief, majority of those seeking abortions are not unmarried girls who fear to have an illegitimate child, the senator insisted.

They are married women often middle-aged women entering the menopause who, after giving many years to raising a family, again find themselves pregnant but feel that they are physically and mentally unfit to undertake another 20 years of child rearing.

There is also the married woman in the poverty section of the population who knows her family income cannot stretch to feed and clothe her present family, much less look after an additional child.

Senator Fergusson then pointed out that in the special Senate committee on poverty, of which she is a member, "we are studying ways of alleviating poverty."

"To permit a mother in this position to be relieved of this unbearable burden seems to me one way of helping to alleviate the problem of poverty."

STARVATION, PILLAGING, CONFUSION

Horror of Biafra Shocks Reporters

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

OWERRI, Nigeria (AP)—The first newspaper men allowed inside fallen Biafra saw famished refugees fighting for food, looting by Nigerian soldiers and heard several first-hand accounts of women being raped by victorious Nigerian troops.

The farther the press party went inside former Biafran territory, the worse the conditions of hunger, homelessness and confusion became.

Everywhere refugees were on the road, teetering all their worldly goods on their heads, hunting lost husbands and children, trying desperately to change their Biafran money into Nigerian pounds to buy what food was available at little impromptu roadside markets.

A young British doctor, working in Nigeria less than two weeks, leaned his head against an ambulance and wept with rage.

LIE IN PUS

The doctor said he had just returned from an open field where 80 to 100 wounded Biafran soldiers were "lying in their own pus and excrement, waiting for treatment that never arrived."

"They bloody well ought to be dead," he said. "Now I've got to go try and fix them up. Don't go near them unless you've got clothespins on your nose."

Without naming the unit, he said the soldiers on duty in the area of the pediatric hospital at Okporo were "such monsters" he never let the nurses go anywhere without an escort, "especially white ones—the native nurses can always go into the bush if something happens."

"The young girls are afraid to come out of the bush, they are terrified of what will happen," Ibo novelist Cyprian Ekwensi told reporters. "There is now a saying among them: 'Stay in hiding or you will be conscripted into the army.'"

"My sister Bibi was taken off and raped by the soldiers," a university student named Paul Ohagwa said. Two Biafran nurses who would only give their names as Theresa and Caroline said they were raped several times as they passed through roadblocks trying to make their way out of the bush.

FEAST AMONG FAMINE

In Port Harcourt, recaptured by federal troops 17 months ago and now a state capital, the state governor entertained top brass at his daughter's wedding feast. But just a few miles away, Ibo refugees faced death. About 600 were crammed into the tiny Niger Maternity Home, many of them lying motionless in the hot sun amid vomit, dust and flies.

A group of British construction workers took up a collection to find food for them. They said three to four died daily.

Many of the children could not move and lay gasping as nurse Elna Petersen of Copenhagen tried to feed them.

"Nobody else seems to want to. I cannot believe this is happening.

"The villages are the worst off," said an Irish missionary, Rev. Eammon McMahon, surrounded by hundreds of refugees begging for Nigerian

Children Still Dying

OWERRI, Nigeria (Reuters) — Children are still dying here today, and thousands more seem inevitably destined to perish, as the Nigerian government tries to make its relief efforts work in former Biafra.

Nine days after the fall of this last capital of the secessionist state, there are children with kwashiokor protein deficiency) here who sit crying helplessly in the dust while their parents fight each other over grains of cornmeal.

The whole civilian population appears to be hungry, and a member of an Austrian Red Cross team said here "plenty are dying, most of them in the bush."

The people here try hopelessly to buy what little food there is with Biafran money, which now is valueless. Thousands throng the market, where there is little more than red peppers for sale.

They say there isn't even cassava, their staple root diet, or yams in the countryside—one of the most densely-peopled regions in Africa. The defeated Ibo, whose leaders formally surrendered Thursday, now are eating cassava leaves to stay alive.

CAN'T FIND FOOD

Red, yellow and white blossoms adorn the trees, but there is no sign of the "food in the trees and the ground" referred to last week in Lagos by a member of a military observer team here.

MP SAYS REPORTS PROPAGANDA MOVE

TORONTO (CP) — Refugees of the Nigerian civil war are not starving, says Robert Thompson, Progressive Conservative MP for Red Deer, Alta.

In a cable from Nigeria, received Tuesday by Rev. William Fitch of Knox Presbyterian Church and World Vision, a relief organization that sponsored his trip, Thimpson said:

"Reports of starving millions have been victory for skillful propagandists. Conditions are under commendable control and no starvation. Resettlement and reconstruction Canada's prime responsibility. Continuing inspection."

Israeli Task Force Invades Jordan Area

From AP-Reuters

An Israeli armored force crossed into Jordan south of the Dead Sea Tuesday night and remained for nearly 20 hours, striking at Arab guerrilla bases, the Israeli military command reported today.

Jordan said there was a major land and air battle.

The Israelis said their force killed five guerrillas and suffered no casualties or damage. Al Fatah, the guerrilla organization, said its men killed two of the raiders and destroyed two Israeli tanks.

It was the longest Israeli penetration of Jordan since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

INCLUDES 40 TANKS

Reports to Amman, Jordan's capital 100 miles northeast of the battle area, said the Israeli force included about 40 tanks and half-tracks backed by heavy artillery.

A Jordanian spokesman said the Israelis invaded at 7 p.m. Tuesday after an air raid in which one Jordanian civilian was killed and three others wounded.

The military command in Tel Aviv said the operation was launched "following repeated attacks from Jordanian territory on the Dead Sea potash works at Sodom and on civilian settlements in the region."

The potash works were shelled Monday night. Israelis said the shelling attacks came from the village of Safi, a target on Tuesday night's raid. It is 2½ miles inside Jordan.

The raid was the first invasion of Jordan by Israeli ground forces in 21 months and was believed to be one of the longest since the six-day war in 1967.

The Amman newspaper Al Difaa said that first reports indicated that one person was killed in the attack and seven others were wounded, including a woman.

A car used by an anti-malaria team was damaged, it added.

NO MENTION

The Jordanian spokesman made no mention of casualties, nor did he estimate the size of the Israeli force.

The area was the scene of Palestinian Arab commando activity during the last two days and the Israeli potash plant at Sodom was shelled twice by the commandos who claimed to have caused heavy damage.

This was the first invasion by the Israeli forces since the battle of Karameh March 21, 1968. The Israelis then crossed the ceasefire line to attack alleged commando bases in the village which lies some three miles east of the River Jordan.

Jet Sale To Libya Confirmed

PARIS (AP) — France disclosed Wednesday it is selling 100 sophisticated jet fighters — double the number previously announced — to the fledgling air force of revolutionary Libya.

Libya in return agreed to stop supporting the rebellion in the African state of Chad where French Foreign Legionnaires are helping fight rebels.

In addition to 50 Mirage V jet fighters Libya will receive under a contract confirmed Jan. 9, the North African nation's 7,000-man armed forces will also obtain 30 Mirage II-E aircraft, and 20 training-reconnaisance aircraft. France sold 50 Mirage Vs to Israel but they are held here by an embargo imposed by France a year ago.

Anti-Pill Onslaught Continues

"Research from these drugs was far from complete at the time they were released for public use," said Dr. J. Edwin Wood, director of the department of medicine at Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia.

Leary Convicted

LAREDO, Tex. (AP) — A jury of eight men and four women Tuesday convicted Dr. Timothy Leary, a middle-aged hippie-style drug advocate, on federal charges of illegally transporting marijuana.

"We're not angrey about this," Leary said. "All we have to do is stay loving and keep cool."

Twelve Executed

Three retired army men and two active officers were executed by firing squad today and seven more executions were carried out in the evening.

Word Refused

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters) — A North Vietnamese embassy spokesman today refused to tell three American wives if their husbands, shot down over North Vietnam, were dead or alive.

Typhoid Tracing By Dyes Tried

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dyes have been put into the sewage system of the liner Oronsay as authorities continue to seek how the water supply of the P & O ship became contaminated with typhoid germs which have put 63 persons in hospital.

There have been suggestions rusted-out pipes might have allowed sewage contamination. Plans of alterations finished before the ship left England are being used in efforts to trace the source of the infection.

But the fact of the contamination did not rule out that there might be a carrier of the disease among the passengers or crew, Dr. David Thompson, regional director of medical services for the federal health department, said Tuesday.

He added it could take up to another 20 days to isolate the typhoid carrier.

As it is, the medical costs for fecal tests of the 1,500 passengers and crew alone have passed $10,000 and "we're not finished yet," said Dr. G. R. F. Elliot, deputy provincial health official.

COSTS MOUNT DAILY

Other costs have mounted daily as the ship flew a quarantine flag for the seventh day. Provincial and federal health officials said they were considering who would pay the bill for other costs incurred.

About 20 of those hospitalized have confirmed cases of the infectious fever, centred in the gall bladder. Ten more persons were taken to hospital Tuesday.

Company authorities have made no decision on when to continue their cruise from Britain to Hawaii and Australia. The cruise was interrupted a week ago when the Oronsay docked here to pick up passengers.

More than 100 provincial personnel are at work on the tests, trying to pinpoint a carrier or other source of the disease.

The discovery of salmonella bacteria in fecal specimens of quarantined persons reinforced suspicions that the ship's water supply was polluted before it docked here.

Officials in Florida said no trace of the disease has been detected among 31 Floridians who disembarked from the Oronsay in late December at Port Everglades.

One crewman flown to London with a back injury subsequently proved to have typhoid. Six are in hospital in California.

Fast-Buckers 'Using Stars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators studying the $90,000,000,000 franchise industry have been told some sports and show business celebrities have sold their names to fast-buck promoters of dubious enterprises.

And some small businessmen have suffered serious financial losses by yielding to the attraction of a nationally known figure to invest in untried franchise operations, a witness testified before the Senate urban and rural economic development subcommittee.

In testimony prepared for today's hearing, Denver business consultant Thomas H. Murphy called for legislation requiring full disclosure of the terms of contracts between big-name celebrities and the franchise companies who trade on glamor to promote their operations.

"These national figures are promoting fields they know nothing about," Brown testified Tuesday. "They have no background or experience and they are playing on the emotions of public idolatry for their own profit. The small businessman who risks his life-long savings to join with them as business partners is the one who suffers.

Security Deposits Ordered

The provincial cabinet has approved land reclamation programs for 12 strip-mining operations including the Utah Mining and Construction Company's Vancouver island copper mine.

A total of $785,000 in security deposits will have to be put up by the 12 companies before mining permits are issued.

Utah's deposit will be $110,000 for its multi-million dollar operation near Port Hardy.

The company's application to dump effluent into Rupert Inlet is being held up by the government pending completion of a water pollution study in March.

HEADACHE PILL CAN 'OVERKILL'

Victoria's hospitals are switching to a new headache pill formula deleting a common ingredient which some doctors think can kill if taken in extreme quantity.

It is thought to be capable of causing irreversible kidney damage if taken in large doses over long periods of time.

Both Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals are phasing out all pills containing phenacetin as new supplies become available.

But doctors here are concerned about the sale of the phenacetin-bearing pills over the counter to the public and want them banned by the federal government.

★ ★ ★

The length of hospital stays are too short to pose any substantial problem with the pills but many patients continue to take them after discharge, Jubilee administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles said Tuesday.

He said the evidence of kidney damage from phenacetin is "circumstantial" but persuasive enough that the society believes it should be declared a restricted drug so it cannot be sold without prescription, even when only a component of a headache pill.

The B.C. Medical Association's pharmacy committee has been successful in persuading hospitals in the province to start restocking their shelves with phenacetin-free headache pills ordered from manufacturers.

But so far the federal food and drug directorate has not declared the ingredient a restricted drug.

The first shipment to B.C. of the new headache pills arrived at Vancouver General Hospital Monday. It will begin appearing in Victoria hospitals in a few days and likely will become available in drug stores this summer.

NDP WON'T BACK MURRAY FOR POST

Clash Over Speaker to Mar Opening

By BRUCE YEMEN

The opening of the legislature Thursday will be marred by controversy over the election of a speaker.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett announced Tuesday afternoon that the New Democratic Party is unable to support the election of William H. Murray (SC — Prince Rupert), speaker for the past six years.

The NDP move is believed unprecedented in the legislature.

The government can go ahead and nominate Murray without the customary seconding of the motion by the leader of the opposition. The opposition has a choice of remaining silent, registering its objection by voice "yeas and nays" — or by formal division.

The opposition could also insist on a debate on the motion, which could delay progress of the formal opening for some time. It is believed that debate would be limited to one or two speakers for each party under parliamentary rules.

Decision not to support Murray in the speakership came as no surprise. He was the target of bitter criticism following an end-of-session censure of Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) on a motion by Herb Capozzi (SC — Vancouver Centre) on April 3 last year.

The motion resulted in Dowding being suspended from the legislature for the balance of the session.

Capozzi's charge against him was that Dowding's Vancouver law firm was paid to shepherd a bill through the legislature's private bills committtee in 1966.

Dowding was a member of that committee but at the time of the case in question he disclosed his interest in the firm and withdrew from the deliberations.

Murray was strongly criticized for his handling of the motion. Liberal MLAs turned their backs on him in the legislature to show their feelings.

Barrett said Bennett called him Tuesday and was invited to Barrett's office to discuss the question of a speaker.

When he arrived, Barrett said he "informed him that it was not possible for us to support the member for Prince Rupert (Murray) as speaker."

Barrett said he would have more to say on the matter in the legislature at "the earliest opportunity."

Indonesia Edges Back From Brink of Disaster

By STANLEY KARNOW

DJAKARTA (WP) — There is probably no better place than Indonesia to observe a fundamental change that, in different ways and to varying degrees, has overtaken nearly all the countries of Asia.

For here, as elsewhere in the Far East, the ideological stereotypes that once promised to fulfill dreams of grandeur have lost their allure, and new leaders are aware that slow, pragmatic methods offer the only hope for development.

This change is most apparent in the contrasting styles of former president Sukarno, who was ousted in 1967 following an abortive Communist coup d'etat, and the present government headed by General Suharto.

In his two decades as the "mouthpiece of the Indonesian people," as he called himself, Sukarno ruled by oratory, spouting catchy phrases and mystical acronyms.

●

But while his magic rhetoric served to unify this sprawling archipelago into a nation, Sukarno gradually outlived his usefulness as his speeches ceased to be relevant to the increasing pressures from a younger generation demanding progress.

Thus Sukarno, like Mao Tse-tung and other charismatic contemporaries, failed to appreciate that a new revolution of rising expectations had replaced the old dynamic of political revolution.

And it is likely that this revolution of expectations would have toppled him even if he had not been swept away in the bloody aftermath of the Communist attempt to seize power. In any event, he has been succeeded by men who are his very antithesis.

In the wake of Sukarno's incredible mismanagement, which turned this potentially rich land into a shambles, Suharto and his government face enormous economic, social and political challenges.

Food production is lagging behind a rapidly expanding population that has made the island of Java, with more than 70 million people, one of the most crowded regions in the world.

Paid miserable wages, the army and civilian administration are corrupt, and their squeeze on local peasants and merchants both discourages productivity and weakens the government's credibility.

The country is also saddled with a foreign debt of more than $2.5 billion, about one-third of it owed to the Soviet Union for military equipment purchased by Sukarno when he threatened to conquer Dutch West New Guinea and subvert Malaysia.

The massacre of roughly a half-million Communists and suspected fellow travellers after the 1965 coup has left social wounds that will take years to heal.

Moreover, an additional half-million relatives of some 120,000 suspected Communists still languishing in jails are virtual refugees whose bitterness and animosity towards the government could degenerate into violence in the future.

●

Unlike Sukarno, who refused to admit that anything was wrong, Suharto does not conceal Indonesia's problems. More important, his government is making rational efforts to resolve them.

Within the past two years, for example, the wild spiral of inflation has been brought under control by balancing the budget and such other measures as offering high interest rates on bank deposits in order to encourage savings.

Using the army as a labor force, the government has also improved roads, railways and other communications, and it is now starting a national economic plan scheduled to raise agricultural and industrial output by 50 per cent in the next five years.

A nine-nation consortium including the United States is currently giving Indonesia $600 million in economic aid this year and, at the same time, foreign investors have pledged millions more for oil, mining and timber concessions.

●

These and other steps prompt Suharto's economic brain trust—composed mostly of American-educated experts—to forecast cautiously that Indonesia will be stabilized by next year.

And as the country's economic growth gathers momentum after that, these specialists predict, many of its political and social troubles can be settled more easily.

On a visit to Indonesia 10 years ago, Soviet Premier Khrushchev listened patiently one day as Sukarno described a series of harebrained economic schemes. Then Khrushchev commented: "Mr. President, before a gentleman can wear a necktie he must learn how to button his pants."

At the moment, then, the Indonesians are not yet ready to wear neckties but, to their credit, they are striving to fasten their trousers.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

DENIES MAKING PROMISE

Bothered Bennett Jumps on Hot Line

By LLOYD BARRETT

Stung by repeated references to an election promise he says he never made, Premier Bennett Tuesday night took direct action to set the record straight.

He called Victoria radio station CKDA's open line program, ticked off the moderator and chided those anonymous callers who referred to the premier's "promise" not to raise B.C. Hydro rates.

"I never made any such promise," said Bennett who stayed on the line for about 10 minutes.

•

The premier declared that what he had promised was that old-age pensioners will be helped.

"And that's exactly what we are going to do," he said.

Bennett said the reason for the proposed rate boost was elementary economics — higher wages and higher costs of borrowing money — and he added there was just no alternative except to increase rates.

Bennett said the current inflationary situation is clearly the fault of the federal government which, he pointed out, had control of the nation's finances. All a province could do — and B.C. was doing it — was to balance its budget.

BENNETT

The premier's call followed a procession of complaints from the public about the size of Hydro bills, especially from persons heating their homes by means of electricity. Several said their monthly bills were in the $40 and even $50 dollar range and for modest-sized homes.

From the tone of the premier's comments it was clear that he was irritated by the complaints and especially by what he told moderator Joe Craig were untruths. He said such mis-statements had a habit of being given credence through repetition.

•

Bennett volunteered the information that he was a "student" of public opinion and that he used the media to keep his finger on the public pulse. He said he was a thorough reader of newspapers and he invited any listeneres who still doubted he had made a no-increase promise to check back copies of the newspapers.

Craig thanked Bennett for calling to straighten out the record and asked the premier if he would be willing to take part in a future pgrogram.

Bennett countered by suggesting the moderator and his listeners make tracks for the public gallery of the legislature especially when the new budget is tabled early in February.

Notorious Killjoy Caught in Act

Cartoonist Bob Bierman will be in for a surprise if he tries to corral more than one panel of the fence surrounding the Victoria aquatic facility site. Mayor Courtney Haddock hasn't worked out the details of his fence-painting contest, scheduled to run from May to September, but the betting is that he'll insist on one panel per person at the Quadra Street site. Haddock says he intends to ask the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association to organize the painting contest along similar lines to the provincial archives contest of some years ago. He says he decided on a May start because "the weather is hardly right for outdoor painting until then." In the meantime, would-be fence painters can at least do a Bierman and book their spot. That's singular, not plural.

Politicians to Hear Themselves Talk

Debate from the floor will be louder than ever this year, thanks to a $30,000 sound system installed in time for Thursday's opening of the 29th British Columbia legislature.

There's new lighting too — making the chamber as bright as day for night sittings. And for each member, a new microphone that flexes to any direction or can be taken from the desk stand to be hand held or worn from the neck on a cord.

PRESERVE QUALITY

Along with rewiring, replacement of paint-clogged accoustic tiles and inconspicous soundproofing of walls and modesty panels, have been implemented under the supervision of George Giles, director of design for the department of public works.

"The problem is to make practical improvements without destroying the essential quality of the interior," he said in an interview. "We're always conscious of the fact this is an historic building — a part of the history of British Columbia."

Although fluorescent lighting and linoleum tile floors have been installed in many areas of the main Legislative Buildings the legislative chamber with its pink Italian marble walls and carved oak woodwork has retained its symmetry since the building was opened in 1898.

"The housing for the new speakers is patterned in shape and color after the hexagonal wrought iron and glass lamps suspended from the ceiling," said Giles. "It will also be suspended but will be taken down in between sessions."

VAPOR LIGHTS

To improve lighting, vapor lights have been beamed on to the four decorative skylight domes in the chamber ceiling from outside and decorative glass side panels have been illuminated.

"Little or no light was visible before," Giles said. "Now it gives the effect of being day lit all the time. "Consequently, the light for reading at desk level has been improved."

Giles said the public address system was replaced as a result of complaints over the years.

NEVER SURE

"We were never sure whether the complaints were about what was being said or what wasn't being heard."

Only once did sound technicians fail in the aim to preserve the appearance of the chamber.

Last week they hung beige-colored accoustic drapery over the marble walls. The drapes were ordered removed by Works Minister W. N. Chant.

"Why, it looked like a bedroom in there," he said. "The sound people think the curtains are a must, but I want that marble which is part of the traditional decor.

The mystery numbers are plates AAA-001 and AAA-002 and just who got them became a matter for conjecture after the man who lined up eight hours for first crack at the plates ended up with AAA-003.

★ ★ ★

A call to Smith at the liquor board office today brought a diversion to the personnel office where the word was: "all we can say is he is a permanent employee of the board and employed in Victoria."

Could he come to the phone? "Oh no. No."

The MVB records show AAA-002 was issued to Andrew Lloyd Mack of 839 Hockley. The directory shows him as a member of the Canadian Armed Forces and a call to his home found him out.

When the government announced the new three-year plates, it promised they would be issued on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Bruce Roger of 971 Lovat spent from midnight to 8 a.m. at the door of the licence issuing office Jan. 5, only to discover it just wan't so.

First through the door when the office opened, he got AAA-003.

Motor vehicle branch officers could not be reached for comment this morning.

Hospital Union Seeks Full-Scale Inquiry

By AB KENT

Public 'Unaware' Of Deterioration

The business agent for B.C.'s largest independent hospital employees' union Tuesday called for a "public court of inquiry" into hospital financing.

Charles Burr, of Victoria, representing more than 800 members of Royal Jubilee Hospital Employees' Association, questioned the current system of hospital administration, public health and preventative medicine.

"We have a worried public and a worried staff today," said Burr.

"We must have a preventive program and give the people the care they need. But we have a government that is worried about cutting costs," Burr said.

NO CENTRAL AUTHORITY

The public, said Burr, is not aware of what is happening in the hospital field.

"There is no central authority the news media can go to to get the full story," he said.

An inquiry would help solve the problem, he said. It should have sittings in the north, in the central interior, in Vancouver, Nanaimo and Victoria, and have the power to call witnesses.

A Supreme Court justice should be named by the cabinet to select members of the "court," who should be guided by terms of reference set out by people in the health disciplines, Burr said.

The court would report recommendations to be acted on by the government.

Burr said cost of the court should be borne by provincial and municipal governments, labor and professional groups.

A pamphlet handed out by the association at the opening of the Eric Martin Institute on Tuesday asked whether politicians have taken over hospital administration, public health and preventive medicine; are they ignoring qualified professional advice? Is there a deterioration in labor relations and negotiations?

The sheet said proper health preventive measures and health care need more than buildings and equipment.

Staff must have strong, dedicated leadership and security without female discrimination and sub-standard income, the pamphlet said.

"We feel matters have deteriorated to such a state that people in this hospital don't seem to know where they're going any more," said Burr.

The union thought it had accomplished this by winning an arbitration raising the ward housekeeper monthly salary from $306.25-$333 to $423-$453 last year.

This year the hospital eliminated the ward housekeeper category and returned the pay level to $306.25-$333, renaming the classification "ward maid," the same as what is covered in province-wide agreements with the Hospital Employees Union, Local 180.

"If management can lay down effective procedures for 1970 without negotiation, then there is no security," said Burr.

DUTIES VARY

"We are told it is the result of the provincial government's new financing. We are told we have to accept the (wage) equalization formula and standards of other hospitals in the province. Really, there are no standards because duties vary from hospital to hospital," Burr said.

There are about 76 women employees at Jubilee Hospital who fall into the ward maid category, of whom 72 per cent have dependents, the association agent said. For some, besides a $120 a month demotion, the hours of work have been changed and there is talk of layoffs, even though new staff is being hired for work in the Martin Institute's 200,000 square feet of floors.

Some staff reductions were made in the two weeks before Christmas, which upset the whole staff, Burr said.

The new staff was being hired at the old rate of pay, he added.

MEET TO DEBATE ABORTION LAWS

The pros and cons of amending legislation on abortion will be debated Thursday, Jan. 29 at 8 p.m. in Victoria High School.

The public meeting has been arranged as part of a campaign organized by Mrs. Elizabeth Murrison, 854 Somenos, for easing abortion legislation.

The meeting will be a panel discussion moderated by Dr. J. S. Haywood of the University of Victoria's biology department.

Serving on the panel will be lawyer Rodney Beavan, Oak Bay MLA Dr. G. Scott Wallace, United Church minister Dr. E. Laura Butler and social worker Mrs. Bernice Packford.

22 Per Cent Pay Hike Offered Cement Union

An offer to raise wages 22 per cent at British Columbia's two cement factories is being voted on today by some 230 striking members of United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers Union.

Union president Bruno Schachel, of Cobble Hill, said results of the vote which could end a strike now in its sixth week, will be known at 9 p.m. Thursday.

But he said there would be no final settlement until verbal commitments made by Ocean Cement Ltd. and Lafarge Canada Ltd. regarding working conditions and training programs are put into writing.

'NOT THE ROOT'

Schachel said the union's eight-man bargaining committee was recommending the settlement, but the company offer is "not the root of the problem."

He referred to "tensions and dissatisfaction" among the membership that relate to working conditions, and which finally caused the first strike in the industry's 57 years in B.C.

It was Schachel's opinion that the companies will "work very hard to prevent this happening again.

"No committee could control the anger of the members if the company doesn't live up to its commitments. It's up to them (companies) to prove they really mean it."

He added: "We have shown a great amount of trust. I hope the company realizes we are sincere."

The cement workers' union had sought a 70-cent increase on a basic wage of $2.95 an hour, plus fringe benefits of 18 cents an hour, over two years. It also desired changes in holidays, welfare and other matters upon which some agreement has been reached.

The companies had offered 30 cents an hour at first. The new offer amounts to 65 cents an hour.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me if Majestic Prince will be racing this year? — G. C.

A. Majestic Prince originally was scheduled to run in two races at Santa Anita, the Charles Strub Stakes for four-year-olds, and the Santa Anita Handicap. However, a knot developed behind one of the Prince's knees and plans for the future were shelved by trainer Johnny Longden until the full extent of the problem can be ascertained. Meanwhile, Santa Anita Race Track is idled by a strike.

Q. What was the lowest recorded temperature in Victoria during the cold spell from Dec. 26, 1968 to March 1, 1969? C.E.B.

A. The lowest recorded temperature was 3.8 degrees above and was taken Dec. 29, 1968.

DISTRICT POWERLESS

Residents in the Henderson-Cedar Hill area were without electricity for more than two hours Tueday night due to a power failure.

The failure occurred at 10:50. Power was restored at 1:02 a.m.

B.C. Hydro officials said a tree limb cut the line.

When repairs were completed, the power was shut off for about 10 minutes over a much larger area. This was necessary to restore the current. It accounts for clocks being 10 minutes behind time in other districts, such as Cadboro Bay.

THE P & O LINER ORONSAY is a splendid ship, a city with lights by night, and a queenly spectacle by day in our narrow inland waters. Her owners' choice of Vancouver as her British Columbia port of call didn't go down well with Victorians when the choice was made in 1954. But for the time being at least, the mainland city is most heartily welcome to the lady.

We can be sure that a bout of typhoid remains an unpleasant, racking experience for those unlucky enough to contract it. But, thanks to medical progress, it's something less than the unholy terror it was when "Typhoid Mary" was cutting her swath in New York City many years ago.

Much publicized Mary, herself immune, was a cook who came to realize that typhoid flowered where she had passed. A simple person, badly frightened, she would neither turn herself in nor change her trade.

★

She flitted in and out of homes and institutions under any number of assumed names, and the medical health sleuths didn't catch up with her for 31 years.

Typhoid Mary died in detention with gall bladder intact, a woman whose misfortune modern surgery could have lifted.

A carrier, and an unwitting one, deserves classification as an Act of God.

Still, we can assume that the Almighty expects man to take thought for such troubles as he may. The Oronsay episode emphasizes the advisability of anti-typhoid shots, or boosters where indicated, for ships' crews as well as for passengers bound to or from Canadian ports.

To that, and to the need for an adequately financed and staffed medical health service here at home. The Victoria Medical Society warning of what could happen here is uncomfortably plain.

Mrs. Mavis Edwards of 445 Sparton Road insists that a parcel which she asserts was sent from North Ireland last Dec. 5 contains nothing that would attract a sniff from a police dog.

★

Yet, says she, that parcel reached her only this morning.

And that, Mrs. Edwards claims, is not all.

She maintains that somebody, somewhere, is nipping the stamps off letters that reach her from friends in foreign lands.

"It isn't our mailman," she says. "We've had the same man for 11 years. He's a nice fellow, and honest as the day is long.

"I don't even suggest that those stamps are disappearing in Victoria. But someone is taking them, and we're not at all happy about it.

★

"I'd like to know, too, why a letter I sent to an old friend in Terrace to thank her for her Christmas gift should come back with an Ottawa imprint on it, and "person unknown" on the front. She's had the same address for 30 years, and she's coming down soon to visit me."

We can only wish her luck in these vexations, and trust that all will be explained to her satisfaction.

But that will take considerable doing!

Traffic control in Victoria has improved considerably in recent years, but some bad traps remain, and a reader points to one of them. He wonders when the dangerous pedestrian approach to the Town and Country shopping centre will receive the attention it needs.

"There have been two deaths so far," he writes, "and as a driver who is also a pedestrian on occasion, I am convinced that it's merely a matter of time before some other person is killed at this crossing. I have once again returned home shaken from seeing two children missed by inches by a speeding truck."

★

I've been shaken there a time or two myself, and so perhaps have you.

Crosswalks are all very well, but that one needs the authority of a traffic light to back it, and for the sake of life and limb, the sooner it can be installed, the better.

That's it, and off now for a police-dog-type sniff at our mild January air. It can't be spring, but how else can one describe it?

Horror Engulfing Biafra

SURRENDERING Biafran soldiers lay down their weapons near Uli-Ihiala, Nigeria, after hearing word that federal forces had defeated Biafra. Eyewitness reports of hunger, rape, looting and murder also began to emerge from Biafra today. (AP Wirephoto)

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

OWERRI, Nigeria (AP)—The first newspaper men allowed inside fallen Biafra saw famished refugees fighting for food, looting by Nigerian soldiers and heard several first-hand accounts of women being raped by victorious Nigerian troops.

The farther the press party went inside former Biafran territory, the worse the conditions of hunger, homelessness and confusion became.

Everywhere refugees were on the road, teetering all their worldly goods on their heads, hunting lost husbands and children, trying desperately to change their Biafran money into Nigerian pounds to buy what food was available at little impromptu roadside markets.

A young British doctor, working in Nigeria less than two weeks, leaned his head against an ambulance and wept with rage.

LIE IN PUS

The doctor said he had just returned from an open field where 80 to 100 wounded Biafran soldiers were "lying in their own pus and excrement, waiting for treatment that never arrived."

"They bloody well ought to be dead," he said. "Now I've got to go try and fix them up. Don't go near them unless you've got clothespins on your nose."

Without naming the unit, he said the soldiers on duty in the area of the pediatric hospital at Okporo were "such monsters" he never let the nurses go anywhere without an escort, "especially white ones—the native nurses can always go into the bush if something happens."

"The young girls are afraid to come out of the bush, they are terrified of what will happen," Ibo novelist Cyprian Ekwensi told reporters. "There is now a saying among them: 'Stay in hiding or you will be conscripted into the army.'"

"My sister Bibi was taken off and raped by the soldiers," a university student named Paul Ohagwa said. Two Biafran nurses who would only give their names as Theresa and Caroline said they were raped several times as they passed through roadblocks trying to make their way out of the bush.

FEAST AMONG FAMINE

In Port Harcourt, recaptured by federal troops 17 months ago and now a state capital, the state governor entertained top brass at his daughter's wedding feast. But just a few miles away, Ibo refugees faced death. About 600 were crammed into the tiny Niger Maternity Home, many of them lying motionless in the hot sun amid vomit, dust and flies.

A group of British construction workers took up a collection to find food for them. They said three to four died daily.

Many of the children could not move and lay gasping as nurse Elna Petersen of Copenhagen tried to feed them.

"Nobody else seems to want to. I cannot believe this is happening."

"The villages are the worst off," said an Irish missionary, Rev. Eammon McMahon, surrounded by hundreds of refugees begging for Nigerian

Children Still Dying

OWERRI, Nigeria (Reuters) — Children are still dying here today, and thousands more seem inevitably destined to perish, as the Nigerian government tries to make its relief efforts work in former Biafra.

Nine days after the fall of this last capital of the secessionist state, there are children with kwashiokor (protein deficiency) here who sit crying helplessly in the dust while their parents fight each other over grains of cornmeal.

The whole civilian population appears to be hungry, and a member of an Austrian Red Cross team said here "plenty are dying, most of them in the bush."

The people here try hopelessly to buy what little food there is with Biafran money, which now is valueless. Thousands throng the market, where there is little more than red peppers for sale.

They say there isn't even cassava, their staple root diet, or yams in the countryside—one of the most densely-peopled regions in Africa. The defeated Ibo, whose leaders formally surrendered Thursday, now are eating cassava leaves to stay alive.

CAN'T FIND FOOD

Red, yellow and white blossoms adorn the trees, but there is no sign of the "food in the trees and the ground" referred to last week in Lagos by a member of a military observer team here.

Fast-Buckers 'Using Stars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators studying the $90,000,000,000 franchise industry have been told some sports and show business celebrities have sold their names to fast-buck promoters of dubious enterprises.

And some small businessmen have suffered serious financial losses by yielding to the attraction of a nationally known figure to invest in untried franchise operations, a witness testified before the Senate urban and rural economic development subcommittee.

In testimony prepared for today's hearing, Denver business consultant Thomas H. Murphy called for legislation requiring full disclosure of the terms of contracts between big-name celebrities and the franchise companies who trade on glamor to promote their operations.

"These national figures are promoting fields 'they know nothing about,'" Brown testified Tuesday. "They have no background or experience and they are playing on the emotions of public idolatry for their own profit. The small businessman who risks his life-long savings to join with them as business partners is the one who suffers.

From AP-Reuters

An Israeli armored force crossed into Jordan south of the Dead Sea Tuesday night and remained for nearly 20 hours, striking at Arab guerrilla bases, the Israeli military command reported today.

Jordan said there was a major land and air battle.

The Israelis said their force killed five guerrillas and suffered no casualties or damage. Al Fatah, the guerrilla organization, said its men killed two of the raiders and destroyed two Israeli tanks.

It was the longest Israeli penetration of Jordan since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

INCLUDES 40 TANKS

Reports to Amman, Jordan's capital 100 miles northeast of the battle area, said the Israeli force included about 40 tanks and half-tracks backed by heavy artillery.

A Jordanian spokesman said the Israelis invaded at 7 p.m. Tuesday after an air raid in which one Jordanian civilian was killed and three others wounded.

The military command in Tel Aviv said the operation was launched "following repeated attacks from Jordanian territory on the Dead Sea potash works at Sodom and on civilian settlements in the region."

The potash works were shelled Monday night. Israelis said the shelling attacks came from the village of Safi, a target on Tuesday night's raid. It is 2½ miles inside Jordan.

The raid was the first invasion of Jordan by Israeli ground forces in 21 months and was believed to be one of the longest since the six-day war in 1967.

The Amman newspaper Al Difaa said that first reports indicated that one person was killed in the attack and seven others were wounded, including a woman.

A car used by an anti-malaria team was damaged, it added.

NO MENTION

The Jordanian spokesman made no mention of casualties, nor did he estimate the size of the Israeli force.

The area was the scene of Palestinian Arab commando activity during the last two days and the Israeli potash plant at Sodom was shelled twice by the commandos who claimed to have caused heavy damage.

This was the first invasion by the Israeli forces since the battle of Karameh March 21, 1968. The Israelis then crossed the ceasefire line to attack alleged commando bases in the village which lies some three miles east of the River Jordan.

Jet Sale To Libya Confirmed

PARIS (AP) — France disclosed Wednesday it is selling 100 sophisticated jet fighters — double the number previously announced — to the fledgling air force of revolutionary Libya.

Libya in return agreed to stop supporting the rebellion in the African state of Chad where French Foreign Legionnaires are helping fight rebels.

Defence Minister Michel Debre revealed the new arms deal with Libya in a closed-door report to the National Assembly's defence committee.

Members disclosed to reporters the gist of Debre's speech.

In addition to 50 Mirage V jet fighters Libya will receive under a contract confirmed Jan. 9, the North African nation's 7,000-man armed forces will also obtain 30 Mirage II-E aircraft, and 20 training-reconnaisance aircraft. France sold 50 Mirage Vs to Israel but they are held here by an embargo imposed by France a year ago.

Some 2,000 French soldiers have been in operation in Chad since last August supporting President Francis Tombalbaye's troops against rebel tribesmen occupying some parts of the largely desert nation on Libya's southern border.

NEWS BRIEFS

Leary Convicted

LAREDO, Tex. (AP) — A jury of eight men and four women Tuesday convicted Dr. Timothy Leary, a middle-aged hippie-style drug advocate, on federal charges of illegally transporting marijuana.

"We're not angry about this," Leary said. "All we have to do is stay loving and keep cool."

Word Refused

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters) — A North Vietnamese embassy spokesman today refused to tell three American wives if their husbands, shot down over North Vietnam, were dead or alive.

Typhoid Tracing By Dyes Tried

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dyes have been put into the sewage system of the liner Oronsay as authorities continue to seek how the water supply of the P & O ship became contaminated with typhoid germs which have put 63 persons in hospital.

There have been suggestions rusted-out pipes might have allowed sewage contamination. Plans of alterations finished before the ship left England are being used in efforts to trace the source of the infection.

But the fact of the contamination did not rule out that there might be a carrier of the disease among the passengers or crew, Dr. David Thompson, regional director of medical services for the federal health department, said Tuesday.

He added it could take up to another 20 days to isolate the typhoid carrier.

As it is, the medical costs for fecal tests of the 1,500 passengers and crew alone have passed $10,000 and "we're not finished yet," said Dr. G. R. F. Elliot, deputy provincial health official.

COSTS MOUNT DAILY

Other costs have mounted daily as the ship flew a quarantine flag for the seventh day. Provincial and federal health officials said they were considering who would pay the bill for other costs incurred.

About 20 of those hospitalized have confirmed cases of the infectious fever, centred in the gall bladder. Ten more persons were taken to hospital Tuesday.

Company authorities have made no decision on when to continue their cruise from Britain to Hawaii and Australia. The cruise was interrupted a week ago when the Oronsay docked here to pick up passengers.

More than 100 provincial personnel are at work on the tests, trying to pinpoint a carrier or other source of the disease.

The discovery of salmonella bacteria in fecal specimens of quarantined persons reinforced suspicions that the ship's water supply was polluted before it docked here.

Officials in Florida said no trace of the disease has been detected among 31 Floridians who disembarked from the Oronsay in late December at Port Everglades.

One crewman flown to London with a back injury subsequently proved to have typhoid. Six are in hospital in California.

Security Deposits Ordered

The provincial cabinet has approved land reclamation programs for 12 strip-mining operations including the Utah Mining and Construction Company's Vancouver Island copper mine.

A total of $785,000 in security deposits will have to be put up by the 12 companies before mining permits are issued.

Utah's deposit will be $110,000 for its multi-million dollar operation near Port Hardy.

The company's application to dump effluent into Rupert Inlet is being held up by the government pending completion of a water pollution study in March.

HEADACHE PILL CAN 'OVERKILL'

Victoria's hospitals are switching to a new headache pill formula deleting a common ingredient which some doctors think can kill if taken in extreme quantity.

It is thought to be capable of causing irreversible kidney damage if taken in large doses over long periods of time.

Both Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals are phasing out all pills containing phenacetin as new supplies become available.

But doctors here are concerned about the sale of the phenacetin-bearing pills over the counter to the public and want them banned by the federal government.

Dr. William Mahon, clinical pharmacologist at Toronto General Hospital, today joined the campign urging Ottawa to take phenacetin off the market as an "over-the-counter" medication.

The length of hospital stays are too short to pose any substantial problem with the pills but many patients continue to take them after discharge, Jubilee administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles said Tuesday.

He said the evidence of kidney damage from phenacetin is "circumstantial", but persuasive enough that the society believes it should be declared a restricted drug so it cannot be sold without prescription, even when only a component of a headache pill.

The B.C. Medical Association's pharmacy committee has been successful in persuading hospitals in the province to start restocking their shelves with phenacetin-free headache pills ordered from manufacturers.

But so far the federal food and drug directorate has not declared the ingredient a restricted drug.

The first shipment to B.C. of the new headache pills arrived at Vancouver General Hospital Monday. It will begin appearing in Victoria hospitals in a few days and likely will become available in drug stores this summer.

In the meantime, Dr. Higgins said the public should be warned of possible harm from over-indulgence in headache pills now available.

Phenacetin is one of three standard ingredients in headache pills at present. The others are aspirin and caffein. Codeine is used also but not by all manufacturers.

By BRUCE YEMEN

The opening of the legislature Thursday will be marred by controversy over the election of a speaker.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett announced Tuesday afternoon that the New Democratic Party is unable to support the election of William H. Murray (SC — Prince Rupert), speaker for the past six years.

The NDP move is believed unprecedented in the legislature.

The government can go ahead and nominate Murray without the customary seconding of the motion by the leader of the opposition. The opposition has a choice of remaining silent, registering its objection by voice "yeas and nays" — or by formal division.

The opposition could also insist on a debate on the motion, which could delay progress of the formal opening for some time. It is believed that debate would be limited to one or two speakers for each party under parliamentary rules.

Decision not to support Murray in the speakership came as no surprise. He was the target of bitter criticism following an end-of-session censure of Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) on a motion by Herb Capozzi (SC — Vancouver Centre) on April 3 last year.

The motion resulted in Dowding being suspended from the legislature for the balance of the session.

Capozzi's charge against him was that Dowding's Vancouver law firm was paid to shepherd a bill through the legislature's private bills committtee in 1966.

Dowding was a member of that committee but at the time of the case in question he disclosed his interest in the firm and withdrew from the deliberations.

Murray was strongly criticized for his handling of the motion. Liberal MLAs turned their backs on him in the legislature to show their feelings.

Barrett said Bennett called him Tuesday and was invited to Barrett's office to discuss the question of a speaker.

When he arrived, Barrett said he "informed him that it was not possible for us to support the member for Prince Rupert (Murray) as speaker."

Barrett said he would have more to say on the matter in the legislature at "the earliest opportunity."
